CITY TO TURN OUT TODAY IN 27TH DIVISION'S HONOR; 500,000 COME TO SEE PARADE

ALL READY FOR SPECTACLE

START AT 10 O'CLOCK SHARP

City Never So Elaborately Decorated or Its People So Enthusiastic.

HONOR FOR DIVISION'S DEAD

Caisson and Service Flag of 1,980 Stars in the Van—Last Review by Gen. O'Ryan.

City and State are ready to pay tribute today to their own division, the 27th, in its parade up Fifth Avenue. From the moment the first unit set foot on Manhattan at the East Thirty-fourth Street ferry yesterday the city capitulated without condition and gave itself over completely to honor the veteran soldiers who, fighting abreast of the finest shock troops of the British armies, broke their way through the "impregnable" Hindenburg line and drove the Germans back to Le Selle River in disastrous flight. It was estimated last night that fully 500,000 visitors had come to the city to see the parade.

All boroughs of the city last night were in complete possession of those who returned victorious from the war. This first outburst of cordial greeting to the division caused the prediction by officers of the Mayor's Committee that the review today of the 27,000 soldiers by the hundreds of thousands who will throng the avenue would be the greatest spectacle in the history of the city.

The decorations along the line of march and throughout the city that will typify to the fighters of the division the joy upon their return were completed last night. The troops that fought so well are ready. For the first time in almost eighteen months the regiments of the old National Guard were quartered last night in the armories where they took their first training for battle. Every detail of their equipment is complete, and every man is anxious to show a grateful city the discipline of his regiment, the perfection of his marching, and the honors he has won.

Even the Weather Man Is Ready.

The police are ready, the grand stand from Sixtieth Street to 110th Street is ready, and the Weather Bureau reported last night that what General O'Ryan describes as "27th Division weather"—the lucky weather that always gave the National Guardsmen clear skies before planned German attacks and foggy and favorable weather when the guardsmen attacked—would surely prevail today. Brilliant skies and sunshine were predicted by the bureau, with fresh breezes from the north in the morning. The minimum temperature probably will be about 36 degrees early in the morning, becoming warmer as the hours pass.

There is no danger whatever of chilly weather or rain.

Before 8 o'clock the police lines will be formed around the grandstands, and after that no one will be permitted to enter without a ticket. At the same hour most of the regiments will have left their armories for the streets about Washington Square assigned to them as rendezvous to await their turn to fall into line. At 8 o'clock all vehicular traffic will be cleared from the avenue, and no civilian pedestrian will be allowed in that thoroughfare between Sixtieth Street and 110th, where the municipal grandstand has been built.

Those who have tickets for the grandstands where the relatives of the soldiers are to sit must be in their seats before 9:30, the Mayor's Committee announced last night, or no guarantee of their place will be given. It was requested also by the Mayor's Committee that all having tickets should follow closely the instructions printed on the cards. They may enter the grandstands only through Madison Avenue, and then only through the cross streets marked on their tickets.

Will Start at 10 O'clock.

Promptly at 10 o'clock General O'Ryan and his staff will leave Washington Square at the head of the column, and the parade will proceed up the avenue. It is expected that it will take the division at least three hours to pass a point so that it will be at least 1 o'clock before General O'Ryan falls out at 110th Street to review his command for the last time. It will be shortly after 12 o'clock before the division reaches the official reviewing stand at Eighty-second Street, where Governor Smith and other officials of the State

King Albert of the Belgians Sends His Nation's Grateful Greetings to 27th

A message of greeting from King Albert of the Belgians and the Belgian nation was received yesterday by Major Gen. O'Ryan through the Belgian Legation at Washington. The King's message reads:

> Having been informed of the triumphal return of the 27th Division of the American Army, I address to you and to your valiant and victorious men who fought so bravely in Flanders the grateful greetings of the whole Belgian nation. ALBERT.

In receiving the message on behalf of the officers and men of the 27th Division, General O'Ryan told Lieutenant Philip Barbier, Military Attaché of the Belgian Legation, that the courage and fortitude of the Belgian people had so impressed the soldiers of the 27th that they valued highly any tribute from the King of the Belgians. The first sector taken over by the 27th was in Belgium, and King Albert was a frequent visitor to the camps and headquarters of the organization.

ADOPT MEMORIALS TO COL. ROOSEVELT

PARK AT OYSTER BAY

Also to Form Society to Perpetuate Late Ex-President's Ideals and Policies.

The Roosevelt Permanent Memorial National Committee announced at the Waldorf-Astoria last night the final plan and scope of the memorials proposed as tributes to the late Colonel Roosevelt. The completed plan was submitted by a sub-committee, of which Governor James P. Goodrich, of Indiana, is the Chairman, the other members being Major Gen. Leonard Wood, U. S. A.; ex-Secretary of State Elihu Root, Gifford Pinchot, William Loeb, Jr., Irvin R. Kirkwood of Kansas City, Senator Frank B. Kellogg of Minnesota, and Henry C. Wallace of Des Moines. The plan adopted is explained in the following resolution, which was submitted to the whole committee and unanimously adopted.

Resolved, That a fund be raised for the following specific objects:

1. To erect a suitable and adequate monumental memorial in Washington.
2. To acquire, develop, and maintain a park in the town of Oyster Bay which may ultimately perhaps include Sagamore Hill to be preserved like Mount Vernon and Mr. Lincoln's home at Springfield.
3. The establishment and endowment of an incorporated society to promote the development and applications of the policies and ideals of Theodore Roosevelt for the benefit of the American people.

That to these ends a Roosevelt Memorial Association be now organized.

It was voted by the National Committee to begin at once the raising of a fund sufficient for the realization of the two memorials, and the endowment of the proposed Roosevelt Society. To this end branch committees will immediately be organized in all of the States, these committees co-operating with and working under the general direction of the Permanent Memorial National Committee in this city.

The approval of the sub-committee's recommendations followed a meeting of the Permanent National Committee, which was held at 1 Madison Square yesterday morning and afternoon. At that meeting the proposed memorial was discussed from every angle, before the sub-committee was appointed to draft the final plan.

Tribute by Whole United States.

The meeting of the committee was presided over by Colonel William Bouce Thompson, the Chairman of the national organization. Chairman Will H. Hays of the Republican National Committee outlined the objects in view, and said that it was the intention of the committee to make the memorial a tribute of the entire United States.

Many suggestions, emanating from all sections of the country, were filed with the committee, and each was carefully studied, all but the most important ones being eliminated and those remaining being then submitted to the special committee of which Governor Goodrich was made Chairman. The principal speeches were made by Mr. Root, General Wood, Senator Kellogg, and Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, Jr.

Mr. Root, in making his suggestion for the memorial, said, in part:

"I think there is no way in which an institution of charity or education can be made a memorial except that the man himself found it. You cannot make it a memorial by attaching his name to it. If you do succeed you succeed but for a short time. There is but one way in which a many-sided and great man can have his memorial really handed down to the future and that is by the interpretation of art. Not to photograph the features, but to idealize the whole nature and service and to translate it into an inspiration for the future.

"It seems to me that there are two things which will truly answer the purpose. One is, if it would be agreeable to Mr. Roosevelt's family, an arrangement could be made so that some time

NAVY WITHDRAWS COAL TUGS HERE

Turns Entire Fuel Problem, Due to Harbor Strike, Over to Garfield Board.

CALLS ON HYLAN TO ACT

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—The position of the United States Fuel Administration in connection with the strike of the Marine Workers' Affiliation in New York City was outlined definitely and officially for the first time tonight in a telegram from Dr. Harry A. Garfield, the Federal Fuel Administration head, to Mayor John F. Hylan. In this telegram Dr. Garfield asserts that he will not intervene unless requested by the Mayor after the Mayor has exhausted his own powers. The telegram pointed out that coal in sufficient quantities to keep public utilities going can be made available on Staten Island, and suggested that the Mayor "consider the possibility of supplying facilities for the movement of coal from these points."

Dr. Garfield's action was taken after he had received from Franklin D. Roosevelt, the Acting Secretary of the Navy, a letter in which Mr. Roosevelt asserted that it was no longer necessary for the navy to assume responsibility for coal deliveries to the public service corporations of New York City. Mr. Roosevelt formally requested Dr. Garfield to see that the Public Service Commission make known its future coal wants, in a sudden emergency, to the Fuel Administration instead of to the Navy Department.

> On the 14th instant, at the request of the Public Service Commission for the First District, I interceded with the Navy Department for assistance in towing coal barges in New York Harbor. Acting Secretary Roosevelt of the navy advises me by letter this morning that as a result of a survey of the harbor situation made last week the Navy Department does not consider that it should continue furnishing tugs for coal barges, as not strictly within its province, and asking that I advise the Public Service Commission and power plant managers that hereafter, in case of emergency, I be notified instead of the Navy Department. I have communicated this message as requested, but do not feel myself warranted in taking action on the facts as at present understood. As I advised Mr. Whitney on Friday last, coal can be delivered via B. & O. to St. George and Arlington piers, Staten Island, in sufficient quantity to keep public utilities going. I respectfully suggest that you consider the possibility of supplying facilities for movement of coal by water from these points. While I am willing to exercise such powers as I possess if the

Only Occupied Germany Gets Food Supply So Far

LONDON, March 24.—Replying to a question in the House of Commons today, Mr. McCurdy, Secretary to the Food Controller, said that no food had yet been sent to Germany except to areas occupied by the Allies.

Food would not be sent to unoccupied Germany, he added, until the German Government had fulfilled the preliminary conditions in regard to shipping and finance. Supplies were already at Rotterdam in anticipation of the fulfillment of those condtions.

About 45,000 tons of foodstuffs had arrived in German Austria.

TO START 3 PLANES ACROSS ATLANTIC

ONE BASE AT ROCKAWAY

Navy Machines Will Fly from the Beach to the Northern Starting Point.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—Naval seaplanes which are to attempt a flight across the Atlantic Ocean in May will start from Rockaway Beach, Long Island, but the actual "jumping-off place" will be much farther up the coast, possibly at some point in Newfoundland. Whether the machines will steer a direct course for Ireland or follow the longer route via the Azores apparently has not yet been determined.

Acting Secretary Roosevelt announced today that the destroyer Barney had been ordered to proceed to Newfoundland to investigate the harbor facilities for the purpose of determining the best base from which the planes could put out overseas, and to find harbors in which landings could be made if it should be necessary for them to descend during the voyage from Rockaway to the flight base.

Lieut. Commander J. L. Kaufman, will command the Barney, which is one of the most modern destroyers, and Commander P. N. L. Bellinger of the transatlantic section of the office of the Director of Naval Aviation, and Lieutenant E. F. Stone of the Coast Guard have been detailed to make the investigation.

Unless difficulties with ice floes are encountered, the Barney is expected to return to the United States within about ten days, when the officers will submit their report.

In disclosing that the planes would leave the naval aviation station on Long Island, Mr. Roosevelt said it was regarded as better to fly the machines to the base to be selected for the flight than to transport them by ship. The aircraft will be refueled and receive a final tuning up before they actually depart overseas.

Several machines are being prepared for the flight, and two or more will probably make the start. Three planes of the N-C type have been completed, and a fourth is nearing completion at the Curtiss plant at Garden City, N. Y. Extensive tests of the N-C 1 have been made, and fifty-one passengers were carried on one of her flights.

Whether it will be possible for the machines to carry sufficient fuel to drive them across the ocean has not been made known. They could refuel at the Azores without difficulty, and some officers believe it would be entirely possible under favorable weather conditions for them to replenish their gas supply in midatlantic from a ship with which a rendezvous could be arranged beforehand.

Detailed plans of the flight are being carefully safeguarded, and there has been no intimation as to whether the machines will keep together or follow different routes. In view of the announcement that destroyers will be stationed along the route to safeguard the crews in the event of accidents, most officers believe, however, that the flying craft will follow one course.

The Navy Department has not entered for the $50,000 prize offered by the London Daily Mail to the first aircraft that completes a transatlantic flight. At the Department today it was said that no inquiries had even been made as to the conditions under which the offer was made. Several British firms and one or

Arrest 19 Spartacide Agitators at Coblenz; Planned a Strike and Then an Attack On Us

COBLENZ, March 24, (Associated Press.)—Three agitators, admittedly Spartacide sympathizers, confessed to the American military authorities today that they came into the occupied area for the purpose of furthering a movement among the German workmen to organize Spartacide forces sufficiently that in time they would gain strength enough to attack the American soldiers and take possession of the Coblenz banks and railway stations and receive assistance from unoccupied Germany.

Frederick Schwarzkopf, one of the leaders of the movement, was arrested Sunday with six other agitators. The Military Police now have nineteen Germans under arrest on various charges connected with efforts to create unrest among the civilian workmen.

Schwarzkopf recently came to Coblenz from Berlin. He told the workmen he was one of the Spartacide group which stormed the palace of the former German Emperor.

The original plan was for an uprising on March 15 or the day after, according to those under arrest, but the plan fell through, owing to lack of interest among the workmen. Schwarzkopf and the other leaders planned to attack the German police station, gain possession of arms, seize the railway stations and telegraph office, and later take charge of the banks and affairs generally. Schwarzkopf said he received 30 marks a day from the Spartacides for his work as an agitator.

The Americans had full information of the plans of the agitators early in March, and soon began arresting the leaders in the plot, and also those who showed any sympathy with the Spartacide movement.

Secret reports to army headquarters from various parts of the occupied area are to the effect that the civilian laborers employed on the roads and various jobs under American supervision have no intention to strike or to join the Spartacide movement.

PARIS, March 24.—The Council of Ten, [or Supreme Council,] the famous body which has dominated the affairs of the Peace Conference, has been practically discontinued as a potent factor in the settlement of the world's affairs, as the result of action taken today. Hereafter this group will be called into session only as a supreme war council to consider immediate military questions.

The government of the Peace Conference will rest with a little group consisting of President Wilson, Premier Clemenceau, Premier Lloyd George, and Premier Orlando. Japan will not be represented.

This action was taken as the result of dissatisfaction over the delays in bringing peace. It was felt that a smaller group could progress more rapidly.

The acute cause of the decision to place the peace settlements in the hands of the four most conspicuous personalities of the conference was the dangerous situation produced by the Bolshevist control of Hungary, which seemed likely to lead to grave dangers in the enemy countries and perhaps elsewhere.

The Council of Ten consists of President Wilson and the Prime Ministers of France, Great Britain, Italy, and Japan, with Secretary Lansing and the Foreign Ministers of the four other powers.

The intensive efforts made today to harmonize the differences on questions that have been delaying the settlement of peace have given some slight hope to those engaged. It would not be surprising if it should come out that at the session of the "Big Four," and the later meeting of the Council of Ten, President Wilson indicated forcefully his impatience over the delay and called for well-defined conclusions.

New Idea for Making France Secure.

The hope is based partly on the rather favorable reception given to a proposal that the additional guarantees demanded by France for security against future German aggressions shall be furnished by making the Rhine provinces a non-military zone in which no German fortified places or troops will be maintained. This would leave the Rhenish provinces in German possession—a situation against which France has protested vehemently and only abated her insistence when convinced by President Wilson and Premier Lloyd George that the United States and Great Britain would never consent to the creation of a separate buffer State, independent of Germany.

President Wilson, who attended the meeting of the Big Four this afternoon and the later session of the Council of Ten, presided tonight at a meeting of the League of Nations Commission, where a further effort was made to finish up the revision of the League covenant.

It is now apparent that not verbal changes alone, but material changes, will be made in this document. There is a possibility of an amendment, giving the smaller nationalities a right to form into groups, with each group entitled to have one representative in the Executive Council, the body whose judgment will guide the League in the use of force to discipline any recalcitrant member. This suggestion came from neutral Governments.

The proposal of Léon Bourgeois for France that the covenant provide for a permanent interallied military general staff receives no support in the League Commission, and its rejection is certain.

Germany Reaching Out for Ties with Lenine; Frees Radek, Russian Who Incited Spartacides

PARIS, March 24, (Associated Press.)—Count von Brockdorff-Rantzau, the German Foreign Minister, has sent Karl Kautsky, one of the Under Secretaries in the Foreign Ministry, to Moscow to see the chiefs of the Soviet Government and to furnish an accurate report on the situation, which will allow the Foreign Minister to study methods as to the bringing about of closer political and economic relations with the Russian Bolshevist Government, says a Zurich dispatch to the Matin.

Karl Kautsky, the foremost German Marxian authority, has frequently condemned the tactics of the Bolsheviki as being opposed to the orthodox Socialist theory of the transformation of capitalism into socialism. For this he has been scoffed at by Lenine and Trotzky and labeled a "back number."

Reds Renew Agitation as Radek Is Released

COPENHAGEN, March 24.—Karl Radek, the leading Russian Bolshevist agent in Germany, who was arrested on Feb. 12 in connection with the Spartacide uprising, has been released by the German Government, according to a Berlin dispatch today.

The dispatch reports fresh agitation by the German Spartacides coincident with the Hungarian revolution, and reports that in these circumstances the release of Radek has created a bad impression.

The authorities say that Radek entered Germany in a perfectly regular manner and that they have no reason for keeping him under arrest.

Some results of the new Spartacide agitation reported are a serious strike in Lubeck, riots in Stettin, and the threat of a general strike in Breslau.

THREAT TO RESIST TREATY PASSIVELY

READY TO YIELD COLONIES

Ebert Declares No Peace Surrendering Danzig to Poland Will Be Signed.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROTTERDAM, March 23.—I learn from a source in closest touch with German Government circles that a definite policy with regard to the peace treaty has now been decided upon. This policy provides for a refusal to sign if it contains demands for the severance from Germany of what the German Government regards as purely German territory. I understand that not only the left bank of the Rhine, but also the Saar Valley and Danzig have been laid down as areas the claiming of which on behalf of the Entente, or any of the allied States, will cause the German Government to refuse to sign the treaty.

Active resistance is not contemplated—it is, in fact, impossible—and the German Government will simply leave it to the Entente to take what measures it thinks fit to enforce such claims or otherwise deal with the new situation which would then arise. What has to be reckoned with, therefore, is the possibility of what has been called in the German press and elsewhere the policy of "passive resistance."

I am also able to state that conditions affecting the colonies will not be regarded, whatever their character, as giving occasion for refusing to sign the peace treaty. That is to say, they will not be so regarded in themselves, although if the other territorial demands already referred to are made in the treaty and not signed, the ruling over the colonies would be stated as one reason for refusal. Otherwise the Germans will limit themselves to a formal protest and at the same time urge that, although Germany may receive no colonial mandate, indirect opportunities shall be afforded for overseas emigration.

THE HAGUE, March 23.—According to the Weser Zeitung, 12,000 people assembled in the Sport-Palast at Berlin on the invitation of "the Committee for the Protection of the Saar District," to protest against the annexation of the Saar Basin. The meeting resolved that neither the Government nor the National Assembly should accept this condition in the peace treaty, and proclaimed the reliance of the German nation upon the Wilson principle of self-determination and demanded its application to the Saar district.

An authoritative statement to THE TIMES correspondent is to the effect that the question of the annexation of the Saar district and a Rhenish buffer State is considered to be economically of the most vital importance to Germany, and that it is more than probable that no German statesman will dare to accept the responsibility for signing a peace treaty if these conditions are included. The Germans maintain that these terms would spell Germany's economic ruin.

The Government will probably have to go in any eventuality, for if it refuses to sign the treaty the people will get no food, whereas if it accepts these con-

WASHINGTON SEES HAND OF GERMANY

SOVIET RUSSIA A PARTNER

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—The Hungarian Government's adoption of Bolshevism is regarded in well-informed diplomatic and other quarters in Washington as the gravest and most serious development in the international military and political situation since the signing of the armistice last November.

It is regarded as a move of a game played jointly by the German, Austrian, and Hungarian Governments, in association with the Bolshevist Soviet authorities at Moscow, in an effort to save Germany in particular, and her Central Power associates incidentally, from payment of the penalty the Entente Powers represented at the Paris Peace Conference contemplate laying on the enemy.

Evidence is cumulative that such a game is well under way, and that the pawns on the international chessboard have been moved rapidly since the end of February, when it became evident to Germany that the Paris terms would be harsher than she had expected.

Rather than accept the terms that are being drafted in Paris, it was intimated tonight, the authorities at Berlin and those over whom they still exercise a real measure of influence at Vienna and Budapest are threatening all Europe and the rest of the world with the anarchy and chaos of Bolshevism.

The resignation of Count Karolyi and of the Hungarian Cabinet with an appeal to the "proletariat of the world" and intimations of a declaration of war against the Entente are believed to be a part of a program for dangling the threat of Bolshevism before the Paris Conference. The Hungarian adoption of Bolshevism is regarded in particular as the fruit of German machinations to overthrow the Entente projects for the formation of the new buffer States of Poland, Czechoslovakia, Rumania, and Jugoslavia.

The situation confronting the Peace Conference is believed in well-informed quarters here to be too serious to warrant further temporizing with the Bolsheviki. It was suggested tonight that the Conference would adopt a very stern attitude toward the Hungarian situation. Entente military authorities are understood to be of the opinion that there is only one effective way of dealing with this newest development—the dispatch of troops into Hungary, Bohemia, and Poland, and furnishing such military aid as is necessary to prevent Bolshevist ambitions and German intrigue undermining or crushing the new nations that are being set up around and in parts of the Central Powers.

The scale on which this may be attempted remains to be disclosed by developments at Paris, but it now begins to look to observers here as if allied military aid will be given to Poland and Bohemia. Moreover, the demarcation of a new military line by the French authorities in Hungary, which immediately precipitated the resignation of Count Karolyi and his Cabinet, and against which the Hungarian Government protested when it embraced Bolshevism for the Hungarian people, is held to be partial evidence that the Entente has been

COPENHAGEN, March 24.—A dispatch from Budapest says the Soviet Government has occupied all theatres and music halls and arranged for revolutionary plays and addresses on the significance of the revolution.

Reports of wireless exchanges between Nikolai Lenine, the Bolshevist Premier of Russia, and the foreign representative of the new Hungarian Communistic Government are also received from Budapest. Lenine was told that the Hungarian proletariat had seized power and had introduced a proletariat dictatorship. Greetings were sent to Lenine as "Leader of the International Proletariat." In greeting the Russian proletariat, the new Hungarian Government expressed solidarity with the revolutionary movement.

In his reply Lenine stated that he had submitted the Hungarian greeting to the Bolshevist Congress at Moscow, which had received it with great enthusiasm. He added:

"In order to communicate between Moscow and Budapest and report on the military situation, it is necessary to maintain permanent wireless communication between the two cities."

He concluded by extending "Communist greetings and a handshake."

At the first meeting of the new Hungarian Government in Budapest yesterday, a dispatch from Berlin says, a Soldiers' and Workmen's Council for entire Hungary was appointed according to plans entered into with the agents of Lenine.

The Communists of Vienna held a meeting of sympathy with the proletariat dictatorship in Hungary on Sunday morning, according to a Vienna dispatch today. The demonstration developed into a manifestation against the Entente. There was no disturbance of the peace, however.

BASLE, March 23.—The revolutionary Government in Budapest has appointed Commissioners for the city, advices reaching here announce. Officers of the municipality have tendered their resignations, but have been asked to remain at their posts. Financial Commissioner Varga has notified bank Directors that reliable bank employes would take up the direction of affairs.

Georgy's Army of Reds.

LONDON, March 24.—A Zurich dispatch received in Paris and forwarded by the Exchange Telegraph Company appears to identify as one and the same the army of 70,000 reported yesterday by the Berlin Lokal-Anzeiger's Budapest correspondent as having been formed secretly under Major Georgy and the Budapest report that a large Russian Red army was advancing on Budapest via Lemberg on a line from Brody to Stanislau. This dispatch says that a Bolshevist army of 70,000 men has crossed the River Dniester south of Lemberg, that it is commanded by Major Georgy, and is composed mainly of Hungarians and Bulgarians who were prisoners of war in Russia.

Two French divisions are at Budapest and several Serbian divisions are at Belgrade ready to take the field, advices from Paris say, and it is believed here that, with the Rumanians, they are capable of meeting the situation. Raymond Recouty, writing in The Figaro, however, states that the divisions in question are of reduced strength and that the Rumanians are absolutely without equipment. Such forces as are scattered over hundreds of kilometers from Banat to Odessa, he says, are quite insufficient to cope with the threat which "everything shows is about to take definite shape."

Some street fighting in Budapest has been reported, and while the lives of Entente nationals are said still to be safe it is urged in Paris that they need the protection which would be afforded by monitors proceeding up the Danube from the Serbian ports. Such monitors the dispatch from the French capital says are understood to be already on their way up the river.

A Czechoslovak army has been sent against Hungary, according to an official report received in Vienna and forwarded to Copenhagen today.

BERLIN, March 23, (Associated Press.)—A special dispatch to the Freiheit announces the disarmament of Entente troops at Budapest. It is unconfirmed, however, and appears questionable.

Austrians Reject Soviet.

AMSTERDAM, March 24.—The Austrian Central Workman's Council has decided not to join the Hungarian movement in introducing a Soviet Government in Austria, a dispatch from Vienna says.

The Council, it is declared, pointed out that such a course was impossible for Austria because it is dependent on the Entente Powers for food.

WAR COUNCIL TAKES UP MENACING SITUATION

Wilson and Premiers Hold Conference Previously—Plans to Send Poles to Koenigsberg.

PARIS, March 24, (Associated Press.)—President Wilson met Premiers Clemenceau, Lloyd George and Orlando at the Foreign Office at 3 o'clock this afternoon for an hour's conference before the assembling of the Supreme War Council.

Both the conference and the supreme council were held amid a feeling of concern over the revolutionary developments in Eastern Europe, and the lack of definite results thus far reached in the Paris conference in stabilizing European conditions.

President Wilson was known to regard the situation as serious and as calling for energetic action toward hastening the work of the conference to completion, and there was reason to believe that this would be one of the main subjects before both meetings, rather than the formal questions on the program.

The War Council today again discussed Poland, which question is close to a settlement. It is understood that the recommendations of the Cambon Committee for a Polish corridor across East Prussia to the Baltic will prevail despite the objections raised by Premier Lloyd George.

The Polish divisions now in France will probably proceed at once to the Baltic and may land at Königsberg instead of Danzig in order to avoid a clash with the Germans over Danzig.

This bulletin was issued after the council's meeting:

"The Supreme War Council met this afternoon from 4 till 6 o'clock. The question of submarine cables captured from the enemy was examined. The future status of those cables was decided on and the terms of reference regarding that status were referred to the Drafting Committee.

"The American proposals regarding the powers of the Teschen Commission were adopted."

The Peace Conference Commission on Czechoslovak affairs held a meeting today to consider questions which have arisen because of developments in the former Austro-Hungarian Empire.

St. Brice says in the Journal:

"The situation is as serious as that which arose when the Congress of Vienna learned of Napoleon's return from Elba. Today, as a hundred years ago, negotiators have provoked and have been surprised by destiny.

"The problem before the Council of Ten today is not the fate of the German cables, or the Teschen Commission, but the imperative necessity of having Poland and Rumania rebuild the watertight compartment which has collapsed. Otherwise Germany, declaring herself alone in a position to save western civilization, will lay down her own peace terms instead of those the Allies propose to dictate to her, or will threaten to take the lead in the Bolshevist movement."

This reflects the views of most foreign editors of French newspapers. Some may express reserve as to how far the movement is or is not inspired by Germany, but they generally agree in placing the principal blame for the event on the delay of peace and insisting upon immediate steps to fight Bolshevism.

They Blame Rumanian, Czech, and Serb Troops for Red Outbreak.

Dr. Ervin S. Acel of 588 West 152d Street, a Hungarian newspaper man, asserted in an interview yesterday that oppression and violence by the Rumanian, Czech, and Serbian troops were responsible for the disorders in Hungary. The only remedy for the situation, said Dr. Acel, was for the French, British, Italian, and American nations to send troops to occupy the Hungarian territory, and for those nations themselves to promise the settlement of Hungarian boundary disputes along lines of nationality.

"The fact is," said Dr. Acel, "that the Rumanians, Czechs, and Serbians, in their efforts to grab as much territory as possible, have pushed as far into lands that are 100 per cent. Hungarian as was possible. Towns with pure Hungarian populations have been seized by the soldiers of those nations, under the pretext that it was necessary to restore order. The Hungarian administration in these towns was dismissed and a foreign one substituted. If any one dared protest, he was flogged or shot.

"The Hungarian people thought this situation would be only temporary, but when the Paris conference seemed to indorse the partition of territories peopled exclusively by Hungarians, the people in despair rose against the invaders.

"In Hungary the economical conditions are very much the same as in Russia. The bulk of the people, as everywhere in Eastern Europe, is made up of small farmers. The small farmer produces his wheat and pork, weaves his linen, and is a self-sufficing economical entity. He exchanges for commodities his surplus foodstuffs at the markets of small towns in his neighborhood. Bolshevism may destroy industry and railroad communication around him, but the small farmer and the country town people can get along just the same.

"The Hungarian middle classes have been thrown into the arms of the Bolsheviki by despair. In Hungary socialistic ideas made little headway before the war, but terrorism by lawless mercenaries has broken the backbone of the middle classes. The Hungarians will give up everything before they submit to the partition of purely Hungarian territories. Bolshevism in Hungary is a protest against oppression. It can be easily overcome by stopping the terrorism of the Rumanian, Czech, and Serbian troops."

Ernest L. Mandel, editor of The Magyar Munkáslap, (Hungarian Workmen's Journal,) says in commenting in that paper on the situation in Hungary:

"Hungary is in the throes of Bolshevism today not because she has any special liking or preference for it, but simply because she feels that she was driven to it by sheer misery and dumb despair. Hungary today is without any coal and on the brink of starvation.

"The Peace Conference seems to have permitted the Rumanians and Czechs and Serbs to occupy the larger parts of the country and to have designated the military lines of demarkation as the political frontiers of a new alignment of nations.

"Is it any wonder that this nation, that can look back upon a history of a thousand glorious years, having been duped into the war by the threat of the Russian menace, during which war she has suffered so much without the slightest possibility of any gain, feeling herself helpless and economically ruined, gave up hope and faith and simply threw herself into the arms of Bolshevism? Will the world condemn blindly and with hate, or will it try to apply a remedy, with compassion and understanding?"

URGES WAGING WAR TO OBTAIN FOOD

APPEAL TO THE PEASANTS

Wants Them and the Workers to Sacrifice Themselves for the Cause.

By GEORGE RENWICK.

BERLIN, March 22.—This evening the new Socialist-Communist Government of Hungary sent out by wireless a characteristically Bolshevist message, which declares:

"To All—The Hungarian Proletariat refuses any longer to bow its head under the yoke of capitalism and big landowners. The country can only be saved from anarchy by the joint forces of Socialism and Communism, while the foreign political situation is such that the Hungarian revolution stands faced with a catastrophe. The only means by which it is possible to save the situation, both as regards foreign and domestic affairs, is a dictatorship by the proletariat."

The message promises socialization of all large estates, mines, large industrial concerns, banks, and means of communication. A great proletariat army is to be organized, which will be used to assert the dictatorship of the workers and peasants against the capitalists and big landowners and the Czech bourgeoisie. Complete solidarity is proclaimed with the Russian Soviet Government, and an armed alliance is proposed with Russia, while an appeal is made to Germany and to German Austria, who are asked to follow the example of Hungarian workers to "break with Paris and ally themselves with Moscow, and, with weapons in hand, offer resistance to their imperialistic conquerors."

It further declares that it is necessary to wage war in order to free foodstuffs and production from the mines. The message concludes by appealing to the workers and peasants to sacrifice themselves to secure the triumph of their cause.

Little independent news has come through from Budapest or Vienna during the afternoon and evening. The Vienna Arbeiter Zeitung declares that the domestic situation has had a great deal to do with the decisive swing of the pendulum.

"Hungary," it says, "knows full well what is at stake. She appears to be fully decided not to retreat before the extreme step of war with the Entente. She reckons on the support of the Russian Soviet Government and on the fear which the Entente harbors regarding the spread of Bolshevism."

This evening's Vorwärts characterizes Karolyi's resignation as "an act of national despair." It maintains, however, that the Hungarian proletariat is not Bolshevist, and it regards the events at Budapest as a warning to the Entente that Bolshevism is a serious danger.

BERLIN AND VIENNA DIFFER.

LONDON, March 24.—According to a Vienna dispatch, it was the establishment of the neutral zone on the Hungarian-Rumanian frontier, which the Peace Conference had decided upon, which precipitated the crisis. This zone was intended to make the Hungarians desist from attacking the Rumanians and to close the gap between Rumania and Poland.

The Entente note defining this zone was dated March 19, the Vienna advices state. The zone was fixed as a belt 140 miles long and 40 miles wide, virtually shutting Hungary behind the rivers Theiss, Szamos, and Maros, and including the towns of Grosswardein, Debreczen, and the entire country behind them. The note required the withdrawal of the Hungarian troops behind the western boundary of the belt within ten days, and authorized the Rumanians to advance to the eastern boundary. The civil government of the neutral zone was to be exercised by Hungarians, under allied control, but the important points would be occupied by allied troops.

The revolution in Hungary caused great excitement in Vienna, but did not surprise those who were aware of the true condition of affairs, says the Vienna correspondent of The Telegraph. He says the Communists of Hungary have long been the real masters of the country, and have been only awaiting an opportunity to get rid of Count Karolyi, who is considered to have been never more than a figurehead.

The correspondent declares that there are no elements in Hungary capable of making a stand against the extremists and that even in Czechoslovakia there are strong Bolshevist influences. He points out that experts agree there is very grave danger of Bohemia following the example of Hungary. The situation is attributed by the correspondent to the failure of the Peace Conference at Paris to recognize the seriousness of the situation and occupy Budapest with Entente troops. He says the only way to save the situation is to send American or British forces there, but adds:

BERLIN, March 24, (Associated Press.)—Recent events at Budapest were not the result of the Entente note outlining the new boundary between Hungary and Rumania, according to the Vossische Zeitung, which says that the situation there was hopeless before the note was delivered. Communists were unemployed and have been ignored by the Socialist Ministers, according to the newspapers.

Mass demonstrations began last Wednesday, when demands were made that every unemployed person receive a sum of 500 crowns for relief, besides payment of house rent and a reduction of food prices by one-half. The newspaper declares that the revolution was impending when the Entente note arrived, and Count Michael Karolyi, the Premier, seized the opportunity in his farewell proclamation to represent himself as a friend of the proletariat.

The Berlin press, from the most extremely radical to the most decidedly conservative, sees in the events which are occurring in Hungary a terrible warning for the Entente. This is the view taken, for instance, by the two extremes of Die Frieheit and the Tageszeitung.

"Entente imperialism," says the latter newspaper, "assisted Bolshevism into the saddle in Russia by the frustration of Kerensky's peace plans. It has now raised Bolshevism in Hungary out of the depths of its impotence. If these two lessons should not suffice, a third would carry terrible consequences into the Entente lands."

VIENNA, March 23.—Asked what effect Hungarian events would have on the political situation in German Austria, Herr Deutsche, Secretary for Military Affairs, said today:

"If the Entente treats us as it treats Hungary no one can guarantee what will happen. A people driven to despair loses self-control. The Entente, by thoughtless decision, might lose a bulwar against Bolshevism, which German Austria really constitutes, if no harm is done it economically and politically."

strengthening the military situation in that portion of Hungary and Transylvania immediately adjoining Rumania.

A rumor was current in Washington today that the War Department would suspend the return of American troops from France pending developments. When this was brought to the attention of an official of the department the statement was authorized, as coming from Major Gen. Frank McIntyre of the General Staff, who has been Acting Chief in the aabsence of General March, that there was no foundation for the report and that the embarkation of troops from France would continue as planned. It was learned, however, that the General Staff has been very active in the last three weeks, and it was intimated in one well-informed quarter that something important was being developed, although the exact character of this was withheld.

BRITISH SEE GERMAN MOVE IN HUNGARY

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, March 24. — The Daily Chronicle urges the gravity of the situation in which Rumania, Poland, and Czechoslovakia are placed by the Bolshevist revolution in Hungary. It describes these three nations as the pillars without which neither a free Central Europe nor a world society based on a League of Nations can be sustained, and says that if their development can be secured as free and orderly States, the German dream of a Germanized Central Europe dominating the world is shattered.

"All these three peoples," it proceeds, "are being assiduously attacked by Bolshevist propaganda, and all three are also menaced by advancing Bolshevist armies. There has been ample evidence that there is collusion between Germany and Bolshevist aggression. Indeed, it would be astonishing if there were not, seeing that the success of the three new States would be a deathblow to German ambition, while their destruction would instantly revive its hopes.

"The adhesion of the Magyars to Lenine gives him greatly improved approaches for attacking the three, whether by propaganda or by military invasion. The absolute military value of the Bolshevist troops is probably low; but, in conjunction with their propaganda, they can effect a good deal, as is evidenced by the recent French evacuation of Odessa and the Russian Black Sea littoral, in itself a very alarming development for the adjoining Rumanian littoral."

The Chronicle then condemns the shortsightedness of the Associated Powers in permitting the people in Rumania to starve, their interminable delay in revictualing Prague and returning the Czech troops to Czechoslovakia, their refusal to sanction Foch's plan for sending the Polish Army in France back to Poland, and their putting off the question of securing Danzig and a safe corridor for Poland.

LONDON, March 24.—Hungary's adoption of Bolshevism is regarded most seriously by the press, chiefly as endangering the efforts of the Entente to build up the Rumanian, Polish, and Czechoslovak States as bulwarks against German domination of Central Europe. All these three States are menaced by advancing Bolshevist armies.

Statements issued at Budapest accuse the Entente of forcing a revolution, but the crisis is held here to be more probably due to the occupation of parts of Hungary by Czechoslovaks and Rumanians, while commentators declare the signs are not wanting that Germany is in collusion with the Bolsheviki.

Dr. Bernhard Dernburg, the former German Colonial Minister, writes to the Berlin Tageblatt something which evidently has a bearing on the situation when he says that Germany, threatened with dishonor instead of security on the west, must turn eastward to satisfy her needs and realize her future.

Commenting on the action of Hungary, The Times says:

"It is not yet possible to judge the origin and extent of this last disturbance. In view of certain menaces which German statesmen and the German press have freely employed, and of the close relations between some Hungarian and German intriguers, it is susceptible of more explanations than one. On the face of it, however, it looks serious."

The evening papers join in criticism of the Peace Conference. The Globe says:

"That [the situation in Hungary] is the natural consequence of the delay of the Peace Conference in making peace, and if the delay continues we will have worse consequences still. All this discussion of the League covenant before even a preliminary peace has been reached simply encourages the spread of the Bolshevist disease and gives our chief enemy opportunities for intrigue."

The proclamation of Bolshevism in Hungary, says The Pall Mall Gazette, has given a shock to the Peace Conference, which is precisely what it was intended to do. The change in the Government of Budapest was effected, not by violence, but by collusion. The paper adds:

"It is a rehearsal of the tactics by which Ebert and Scheidemann think of greeting the terms of peace."

The Westminster Gazette, a strong supporter of the League of Nations, says that knowledge of what has taken place at the Peace Conference is very scanty, "but so far as we can ascertain it has been perpetually losing its way in a thicket of details and allowing its great decisions to be postponed by differences on questions which, though intrinsically of great importance, are yet subordinate to the main issues."

"Cynics and militarists," it continues, "are blaming President Wilson and the League of Nations for this unhappy state of things."

The paper argues that if the Peace Conference had gone on in the old-fashioned way and imposed terms as victors, the Conference could not have settled everything, but now the Conference, it adds, must remain in permanent session until its duties are taken over by the League of Nations.

SAYS ALLIES FAILED TO HELP KAROLYI

Creel Ascribes Bolshevist Upheaval in Hungary to Inaction of the Peace Conference.

HAD AMPLE WARNING OF IT

Made No Effort to Guard Provisional Boundaries Fixed by Armistice and None Was Respected.

The triumph of Bolshevism in Hungary was known to be inevitable more than a month ago, the menace of the situation was directly communicated to the Peace Commissioners and was attributable to their delay in concluding peace, and unless they act with celerity to stabilize Europe, Bolshevism will spread to Poland, Czechoslovakia, and other nations, according to George Creel, former Chairman of the Committee on Public Information, who returned recently from Paris after severing his connection with the committee.

Mr. Creel left President Wilson and his party in Rome and returned to Paris on Jan. 30 after spending a month in touring Austria, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, and Poland. Basing his conclusions upon his own direct observations in these countries within the very recent past, Mr. Creel said yesterday that not only must the Peace Conference hasten its deliberations, but that the only sort of peace it could decently conclude and the only sort in any event it could conclude in time to prevent radical anarchy sweeping over many spots in Europe was a peace based upon a League of Nations. Otherwise, he said, there would have to be a peace based upon the old balance of power—a peace that would result in a saturnalia of grabbing and punitive retribution and which would come too late.

"The triumph of Bolshevism in Hungary had been hanging fire for a year," Mr. Creel said. "Karolyi had put in a strong, democratic Cabinet and he had cleaned out the old crowd, sweeping away all the links that had tied Hungary to Austria as a German pawn. He had set up a Cabinet of Liberals, but just as he had none of the old royalists, he had no Bolsheviki. As a result, the representatives of the old order united with the Bolsheviki against him, and under the existing conditions it was only a question of time until they could overthrow him.

Karolyi Was for Wilson's Ideas.

"It must be remembered that Karolyi at once proclaimed his absolute allegiance to President Wilson's ideas; that he set about late in October demobilizing the Hungarian armies, and that he told the people that, while Hungary must pay the penalty for the false leadership of the past, they could rely upon President Wilson to bring about a just peace. Next General Franchet d'Esperey signed the armistice terms fixing certain boundaries which were to be maintained intact until the negotiation of peace and the conclusion of final terms.

"In no single instance were these boundaries respected. They were overrun from all sides, particularly by the Rumanians. To prevent this there should have been an absolute declaration by the Peace Conference that the Hungarian boundaries must be respected during the period of the Hungarian demobilization and up to such time as the conference had fixed final peace terms. They should have served notice that there must be no encroachment whatever upon Hungarian territory.

"Further, the Commissioners should have displayed some confidence in Karolyi and his cause and should have made some declaration that within a short time he would be enabled to appear and present his cause to the Peace Conference. Instead of that, no help was given to him, no encouragement, no recognition, and, worst of all, no food. The food conditions in Hungary were simply terrible, and there Karolyi was left to stand alone, with the old order menacing him on one side and the Bolsheviki on the other.

"What happened in Hungary is going to happen soon in all those other countries unless something is done, and done quickly, to let them know where they stand. Take Czechoslovakia, for example. They have the best national spirit of any country in Europe; Masaryk had the strongest Cabinet in Europe, but no country, no Government, can stand this uncertain, indecisive period, especially when its factories are idle, its people starving and almost without clothing.

"Take the case of Poland. Protection was confidently expected by the people of Poland, and they demanded that the Polish légionnaires be sent to them from Paris while the Germans were tearing at them on one side at Posen and the Bolsheviki were threatening on the other side. Yet these légionnaires, who, to the people, meant law and order, were kept in Paris simply because Germany objected to their passing through Danzig on their way home. I saw more famine in Slovakia than anywhere in Europe when I was there in January.

"Despite the conditions which I describe and which I witnessed at the time, Karolyi even then could have been saved. I had been to Prague, to Bohemia, to Poland and back through Slovakia to Vienna. It was about Jan. 20, ten days before I concluded my trip, and while I was myself in Budapest, that Karolyi, to my definite knowledge, sent word through the French and American representatives of the Peace Commissioners in that capital that he could last just two weeks longer unless something were done. He asked two things—that the terms of the armistice be respected in relation to the boundaries of his country and that some official notice be taken of his existence by the Peace Conference in order that he might have some means of calming the people."

Mr. Creel said there was no doubt that this information had been communicated to the Peace Commissioners by their Budapest representatives.

Turning to a discussion of reports that the Bolsheviki had been in complete control of the situation from the start and had chosen their own time for a coup, he continued:

"The Bolsheviki were not masters of the situation from the start. Karolyi had the situation absolutely in hand. It was while I was in Budapest that the first Bolshevist emissary arrived from Russia. He was Bela Kun, Lenine's secretary. And that marks the time when the Bolshevist campaign for the seizure of the country really started.

Quick Action Necessary.

"Now then, unless the peace deliberations are hurried to a conclusion and these uncertain nations are dealt with definitely and authoritatively, that same thing is likely to happen everywhere. The situation in Hungary and the threatening situation in some other countries is due to hunger, unemployment and lack of decision. It is these things that breed Bolshevism."

Asked to define just how he thought the Conference could speed up its work and to say whether the suggestion from some quarters that immediate peace could be brought about by separating the League convenant as a matter for future deliberation and dealing only with the terms to be vouchsafed Germany, Mr. Creel said:

"The terms of peace are absolutely dependent upon a League of Nations. The Conference must choose between the League of Nations and the old balance of power. If there is not going to be any League of Nations, every one of the allies is betraying its people if it doesn't grab everything it can get, if it doesn't try to weaken and even to crush its enemies, both actual and potential. Therefore the peace terms cannot be written until that one fundamental thing is decided.

"And without the League, the deliberations would last much longer. France, for example, would at once demand to be left in possession of the left bank of the Rhine as a matter of commonsense protection; Italy and England would have to put themselves in position to guard against defeat in the inevitable next war and so on.

"So at once this war which was waged on the high principle that there should be no conquest whatsoever would turn into a regular saturnalia of annexations and punitive indemnities. Thus the answer to the whole problem of a staggering, disintegrating Europe is the adoption of the League of Nations as the one great fundamental of any peace treaty to be concluded. The only possible opposition to it, the one reason for delay, lies in the fact that the League of Nations stands squarely in the path between the victorious nations and the old European traditions of the balance of power."

Edgar Sisson Skeptical.

The following communication was sent to THE TIMES last night by Edgar Sisson, formerly of the Committee on Public Information:

Washington, March 24, 1919.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The gravity of the news that Hungary has chosen to "go Bolshevik" is increased by the immediate signs of the German, Austrian, and Hungarian effort that will be made to disseminate to the press of the Western world false reports concerning Bohemia.

The aim of such reports will be to create the impression that Bolshevism is rampant in Bohemia.

The fact is that the Czechs are the bulwark of Central Europe against Bolshevism, and that if the Germans, Austrians, and Magyars can break that bulwark they will have a solid Germanic Central Europe.

Next to breaking it, if they can make the world believe that it is being broken, they hope they can keep support from reaching Bohemia during the time they will thus have to continue their attempt against that devoted pro-ally, pro-American, and cobelligerent nation.

An instance of method in exact point is afforded in THE TIMES this morning, March 24, by a paragraph in the dispatch from your Copenhagen correspondent, Page 1, Column 7, in which he quotes the Berlin correspondent of the Berlingske Tidende. The paragraph is:

"According to the correspondent quoted, it is rumored that Czech regiments to the north of Hungary have united and it is feared that the news of what happened in Hungary will have an inflammable effect in the Czech State, where Bolshevism has raised its head more boldly than in any other country outside of Russia."

The truth is that Bolshevism has not raised its head in Bohemia. The equal truth is that Germany, Austria, and Hungary have exerted every outward pressure to that end—and still have not been able to agitate successfully within.

I was in Prague the last week in January when Vienna sent out a wireless dispatch that the Czech Army in Prague had mutinied and "gone Bolshevik." Absolute order and "will to order" prevailed in Prague. The lie was made entire. Bohemia has not fought four and half years for liberty from Germany to lose it again to them.

In a Washington newspaper this afternoon, I notice an Associated Press dispatch, also from Copenhagen, that "according to a report received here from Berlin," President Masaryk of Bohemia has resigned.

WANTS WILSON TO SPEAK OUT.

Northcliffe Paper Says He Will Be to Blame if His Principles Fail.

Copyright 1919 by The Chicago Tribune Co.

PARIS, March 24.—The leading editorial of the Continental edition of The London Daily Mail, in the issue of yesterday, reads as follows:

"A critical week of the conference has run its course, but the position is not less critical. Two days last week were practically wasted. Instead of marching the conference marked time and at this stage in the proceedings to mark time is to lose it.

"The conference leaders are suffering from nervous inertia. It is not yet a case of nervous prostration, but that will come unless they bestir themselves. It is due to their own mistakes and their own failure to keep in view the ends for which the war was fought.

"Where all are responsible, no man deserves special blame. But there is one man whom the world will chiefly blame if the conference fail, or if it be overwhelmed by untoward events, because its work was not done in time. That man is President Wilson.

"It was he who laid down the principles on which the allied and associated peoples wished peace to be based. It was he who was acclaimed throughout Europe as the apostle of a new era. He told us his principles represented the ideals of the American people. We believed him. We know they represented the ideals of the democracies of Europe. He is therefore directly responsible to us as well as to his own people for a practical application of those principles in peace.

"Ought he therefore to arise and dictate to Europe the terms of peace? By no means. The European peoples welcomed him as an interpreter of their half formulated aspirations. They looked with sympathetic respect upon the transatlantic counsellor who came to aid their own statesmen in the drafting of peace. But they would resent any attempt on his part to dictate to them exactly what the peace is to be.

"President Wilson has not attempted to dictate. He has sought knowledge and has offered advice. His fault has been he has not always seemed to realize the true strength of his own position or to use it in the right way.

"What is that position? He represents officially the people and the Government of the United States. Nobody in Europe has the right to go behind his back and ask exactly how far the American people are in absolute agreement with him. Were so impertinent an attempt to be made it would fail. The President probably will be found to represent the American people exactly in proportion as he succeeds in helping to make a just peace.

"His success or failure will depend largely upon himself. He knews the kind of peace which the American people would think good. He cannot hope to stand before them as the bearer of any other kind of peace. He is entitled—nay, he is in duty bound—to tell us exactly the sort of peace for which he feels he could be answerable to the American people.

"The principles he laid down were general principles. During his stay in Europe he has learned much about their practical application. He needed to learn, and has not been ashamed to learn. A statesman who will not learn is past praying for.

"Now, with the help of that body of experts, than whom no better are at the command of any allied Government, he knows within a very narrow margin, on comparatively all important details, exactly how he would wish his principles to be applied to the main questions that are still awaiting final solution.

"Let him put forward those solutions as representing the considered views of the American delegation. The chief allied delegations will then quickly see how far they are in agreement with him. The points of difference are likely to be few. When they have been ascertained let them be made public. It will soon be seen whether they will stand the test of public opinion."

PARIS, March 24.—"The French Government has found a means of settling difficulties by re-establishment of censorship. It cuts up newspaper articles instead of cutting out frontiers. It is an easier way, but does not M. Clemenceau remember what he said of this system, which succeeded so ill with his predecessor?"

Thus M. Gauvain, in the Journal des Debats, gives expression to the general opinion about "the policy of muzzle" which has reduced the French newspaper columns during the last few days to the patchwork appearance common during the war.

"The situation at present is serious. There is a divorce between public opinion and the Peace Conference," says a writer in the Paris Midi.

From these two quotations one can judge the real state of feeling in France about which there seems to be considerable uncertainty in America as a result of the fog of censorship and silence.

In the article from which the first quotation is taken, M. Gauvain makes the Polish and Syrian imbroglios the text for voicing his countrymen's complaints against the conference with such a careful use of phraseology and circumlocution that the whole indictment appears unscarred by the fantasies of the blue pencil. In substance his argument is as follows:

The position of affairs in eastern Europe has proved the necessity, (still further emphasized by recent events in Hungary,) for immediate action. Enough precious time has been wasted already in discussion. Unless the conference acts at once, it will be too late.

It is, doubtless, very fine and praiseworthy that the conference should seek the best possible solution of the Polish problem. But a search for perfection does not produce results.

If every minor injustice must be taken into consideration, we shall get nowhere and far worse wrongs will ensue. Thus Lloyd George has held up the Polish settlement because he says there are nearly two million Germans in the region of Danzig. To begin with, that is not very surprising after a century and a half of Germanization devoted to "peaceful penetration" in the key points of Polish territory. The same thing applies to Posen. But both are vital to Poland, if Polish freedom is ever to be a reality.

And, anyway, are we not at war with Germany and do we expect the Germans to say amen to all our attempts to cut their war claws? If the Germans offer resistance, we must show them who is master. We can do it.

At the same time, the Poles themselves should be made clearly to understand that, though we are giving them much, we are not giving them everything. They, too, must toe the line as we decide. But, above all, let us make that decision, make it now and stick to it.

The same thing applies to Syria. What is the use of sending another committee way off to Syria? Have not the races concerned got accredited representatives here from whom the conference learns far more than from a time-wasting commission, touring among a people, half of whom won't dare to talk and the other half of whom are too ignorant?

What if our settlement does contain minor imperfections? They can be rectified later. Meanwhile if we don't decide, and decide quickly, all Eastern Europe and perhaps the Near East, too, will be aflame about our heads.

Thus M. Gauvain sums up what every Frenchman has been saying for the past month, some of them for much longer.

I once asked a French General who was himself no mean contributor to France's victory, what he thought was the prime factor of Foch's triumph.

"His ability to decide rapidly on a line of action," he replied, "to decide and stick to his decision. There were times, more than once, last Summer when a weaker man would have wavered, sought other advice or changed his plans. Foch kept his own councel, stuck to his guns, and won through."

What France asks now is that the conferees should take a leaf from the Marshal's book.

RED LEADERS IN HUNGARY.

Bela Kun Formerly Professor of Law in a University.

BERLIN, March 23, (Associated Press.)—That the seizure of power by the Hungarian Communists is the result of Russian Bolshevist missionary work and the financing of the movement with Russian rubles seems apparent from the history of the movement.

Bela Kun, (or Kuhn,) the new Foreign Minister, who probably was the man who formulated the communistic proclamation, spent a long time in Russia a sa prisoner and made there the acquaintance of Nikolai Lenine and Leon Trotzky. He was originally chosen to organize the Spartacide Bolshevist movement in Germany, but went instead to Hungary. The Hungarian Socialists would have nothing to do with Kun, and he thereupon founded the Communist Party.

Of the other leaders of the Communist movement, Major Georgy, who is a grandson of the 1848 revolutionary Georgy, and Major Geizy, also a member of an old Hungarian family, likewise had been in Russian captivity and there became infected with Bolshevism. They were participants in the plan to form a Communist army of 70,000 men in Hungary.

George Ranassy, also one of the leaders in the Communist movement, was arrested last February, charged with bringing 30,000,000 rubles from Russia to Hungary to be used in forming a Communist army. He and other leaders are likewise accused of receiving large sums from the Russian Red Cross.

Before the war Bela Kun, the Hungarian Communist Foreign Minister, was an instructor in the law school of the Francis Joseph University at Klausenburg, Transylvania. It was reported erroneously from Budapest during the disorders there late in February that Kun had been lynched by those opposed to his communistic doctrines. He is said to have been Lenine's aid in Russia.

Alexander Gorbai, who has assumed the Presidency of the Revolutionary Government of Workers', Peasants' and Soldiers' Councils, is a workman who, at first a conservative Socialist, has now moved to the Left.

Joseph Pogony, (Pagany?) Minister of War, formerly was President of the Soldatenrat and was an orderly in the Second Army. He was once punished for indiscretion in an army matter.

Bohm, who has become Commissioner for Social Affairs, was once Minister of War and has lately gone to the Left.

DOUBTS BERLIN REPORT MASARYK HAS RESIGNED

COPENHAGEN, March 24.—T. G. Masaryk, the President of Czechoslovakia, has resigned, according to a report received here from Berlin.

Charles Pergler, Commissioner of the Czechoslovak Republic in the United States, who has been at the Vanderbilt Hotel here since Friday, doubts the truthfulness of the report that President Masaryk had resigned.

"The Czechoslovaks have been fighting Teutonism and German methods with arms for four years, and Teutonism is now striking back," he said last night.

"I am cabling Paris for explanations as to the report concerning President Masaryk, but I think that it is of equal credibility with the report that was given to the world about two months ago that the Czechoslovak Minister of Foreign Affairs, Dr. Edward Benes, had resigned.

"It was a German author who said that war was merely a continuation of politics by force, and conversely that war may be continued by other methods than those of the battlefield. It is to the interest of the Germans to create an impression of instability of the Czechoslovak Republic, and I therefore appeal to the American people not only to be patient, but also to accept with reserve all reports of unstable conditions within the boundaries of the new nation.

"I have all the more reason to ask for this because only within the last two days I had conferences with a representative of the Czchoslovak Minister of Education, who sailed for Prague on Saturday, and who emphatically asserted that President Masaryk's authority was recognized throughout the republic; that there were no signs and no indications to justify any fear of the spread of Bolshevism.

"When the public recalls that there is standing in Siberia a Czechoslovak army facing the Bolsheviki, and that the Czech Social Democrats at a recent conference denounced the Bolsheviki, it will understand the necessity for caution in accepting reports such as the one just published."

Professor Thomas G. Masaryk was elected President of the Czechoslovak Government on Oct. 20, 1918, while he was in the United States. He was inaugurated President at Prague on Dec. 22.

CABLES ARE NOT PRIZES.

PARIS, March 24.—The American view that submarine cables are not prizes of war has been upheld by the War Council today.

The question was presented in a report by a committee, covering three main points. First, the committee was unanimous that cables could be cut as an act of military necessity; second, the committee was divided on the question as to whether cables were prizes of war, like warships, the British, French, and Japanese holding them to be prizes and the United States and Italy taking the opposite view; third, the committee was unanimous that the United States or other third parties should be consulted on the final disposition of German cables landing on their shores.

The council finally approved the view that cables were not prizes, but subject to the same disposition as other private property. It is in this form that the subject will be drafted for insertion in the treaty.

The decision affects thirteen German cables, including those to America and several in the Pacific, connecting former German colonies.

PHELAN CABLES PROTEST ON JAPAN

ASKS BORAH FOR SUPPORT

Idaho Senator Replies That Japan Is Jockeying to Keep Present Concessions—Hitchcock Dissents.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—Viewing Japanese insistence before the Paris Conference for recognition of race equality in the League of Nations as the forerunner of an attempt by Japan to have the immigration bars thrown down to Japanese desiring to enter this country, Senator Phelan, Democrat, of California, sent a telegram today from San Francisco to Senator Borah of Idaho asking that he back up a protest the Californian had sent to the American delegates at Paris against any such provision going into the covenant.

Senator Phelan regarded the attitude of the Japanese, he said, as threatening the immigration laws already existing, and he urged Mr. Borah, who has been conducting a fight against the League of Nations, to attempt, with other opponents of the League, to prevent the inclusion of the racial clause suggested by Japan's delegates as being contrary to the spirit of American policy.

When Senator Phelan left Washington for the Coast he allowed it to become known that he intended speaking for the League of Nations and in support of President Wilson's efforts at Paris. His telegram to Mr. Borah was the first intimation that he had discovered what he regarded as a snag in the League Constitution.

Mr. Borah wired Senator Phelan that he would support his effort, pointing out that, under the League covenant as already drafted, Japan would be in position to force judgment by the League's Executive Council upon problems of immigration.

Mr. Phelan's telegram to Mr. Borah follows:

"I have today sent the following cablegram to the American Peace Delegation at Paris protesting against racial equality for Orientals.

"Any declaration in Constitution of racial equality or just treatment may be construed to give jurisdiction of League over immigration, naturalization, elective franchise, land ownership, and marriage, and should be avoided. An affirmative declaration that these are domestic questions should be made in consonance with established American policy. Believe Western Senators and others will oppose any loophole by which Oriental peoples will possess equality with white race in United States. It is vital question of self-preservation.

"Will you not reinforce my message by cabling the American Peace Delegation, Hotel Crillon, Paris?"

Mr. Borah's reply read:

Says Japan Is Jockeying.

"I am in thorough accord with the principle you announce, and will be glad to co-operate in every way. But I call your attention to the fact that the League Constitution, as it new reads, unquestionably gives jurisdiction over immigration to the League. There is not the slightest doubt that the question of immigration could be forced by Japan in three different ways before the Executive Council or delegate body, so that the League would have to determine it, and if it did determine it it would be determined by alien votes.

"It must be clear to any one that Japan is simply raising the question of further terms as to racial equality for the purpose of drawing attention away from a discussion and preventing the modification of clauses already in the League with which she will ultimately be satisfied. Those who are supporting the present Constitution are turning the question of Chinese and Japanese immigration over to a tribunal, the vast majority of whom are aliens. I trust we can rely upon you to help defeat this un-American scheme, which would ultimately, if carried out, put the American standard of labor on a level with the Japanese and Chinese standards.

"Those who favor this proposed League, and at the same time protest over a general expression as to racial equality, have either not studied the proposed Constitution or they are willing, for the sake of party regularity, to jeopardize the rights of American labor."

"It is perfectly obvious," said Senator Borah, commenting upon Mr. Phelan's telegram, "that Japan has taken advantage of the possibilities of the League Constitution eventually to bring about a verdict upon the immigration problem. It cannot be avoided.

"The more this League of Nations affair is thrashed out the more its defects are apparent. Every audience before which I talked, whether doubtful or not at the start as to the real utility of the League of Nations, showed deep concern when it was brought home that America would be putting into the hands of alien nations, such as Japan, the regulation of matters such as immigration.

"The American people favored the League of Nations idea at first—for it undoubtedly took with them—because they hoped it would be something that would prevent a future world war. Just let them learn to what extent the League would sacrifice American independence in adjusting its own affairs at home, in its relations with foreign nations, and the people will rise against it. I believe there is a stronger feeling aginst the League now than there was a week ago. The antagonism to it, I am convinced, is growing every day."

Sees League Idea Growing.

Senator Hitchcock, Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, who returned to Washington today after a sojourn in Georgia, where he played golf with ex-President Taft, foremost Republican proponent of the League of Nations, disagreed with Senator Borah as to the broadcast feeling about the League of Nations.

"From all I can hear, the League of Nations idea is growing in this country every day," said Mr. Hitchcock. "It may be that amendments will have to be made; the President himself has said they may be necessary. But, in the main, the League of Nations as worked out by the Paris Conference will prevail. As to the Senate accepting it as part of the treaty of peace, once it is consummated, I have not any doubt. It will only take a majority vote to keep it in the peace pact, and a majority of the Senate, I feel confident in saying, will be for it.

"I regard the talk to Japan's trying to force the immigration problem through the League of Nations merely as a reflex of the character of argument we find here in opposition to the League. I fail to see that there is anything to fear in Japan's suggestion that immigration questions be considered by the League. That does not mean that treaties, gentlemen's agreements or anything else now existing in respect to immigration will be upset by the League. This comment about Japan's attitude I put along with that expressed in French newspapers, which say that the United States and Great Britain are trying to control the whole League."

Senator Hitchcock was asked if he considered the Bolshevist revolution in Hungary as an eventuality that could be easily handled through the League of Nations.

"It is precisely for that sort of juncture that the League of Nations is to be created," replied the Senator. "I think that the uprising in Hungary shows the necessity for some controlling influence such as the League of Nations. The League would work as a machine in adjusting uprisings like that in Hungary."

Asked if he thought the Central Powers ought to be admitted in the League of Nations, Senator Hitchcock replied:

"Eventually they will be, but not until they have purged themselves of the war fever. Germany will have to wait an appreciable time before she will be permitted to join the League. She will have to indicate that she has been thoroughly chastened. In other words, the Central Powers will have to be on probation before being admitted to the League."

Warns Lodge and Knox.

Senator Hitchcock spoke of the attitude of Senators Borah and Reed in opposition to the League of Nations as extremely "radical." The "bottom had fallen out of their campaign," he said, many of their former supporters deserting them. Senators Lodge and Knox, he said, were not so drastic in their antagonism as Senators Borah and Reed, but they were suggesting amendments that might embarrass the entire scheme of the League, if an attempt were made to put them through at Paris.

"Senators Lodge and Knox are treading on treacherous ground," said Mr. Hitchcock. "Their opposition, though, will crumple up. Even the President, while having said that certain amendments might be necessary, is not particularizing in the fear, no doubt, that he might suggest something that might later on embarrass the American viewpoint when some other nation might, of its own accord, insist on amendments to offset our own."

Senator Hitchcock will start upon a stumping tour of Eastern cities late in the week. In his itinerary will be a joint debate on April 7 before the Economic Club of New York with Senator Lenroot, Republican, of Wisconsin. Other engagements will be a speech on March 28 before the Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce, April 8 at Newark under the auspices of the Board of Education, another engagement in Philadelphia either April 5 or 10, when he will debate against George Wharton Pepper, President of the League to Preserve American Independence, this debate being under the auspices of the League to Enforce Peace, of which Mr. Taft is the head, the League to Preserve American Independence and the Contemporary Club; a speech on April 17 at Boston, before the City Club, and on April 3 another speech in Philadelphia, before the American Academy of Political Science. After that Mr. Hitchcock will go on a stumping tour of the Middle West.

HOW ROMANOFFS DIED.

Execution of Czar and Family Confirmed by French Officer.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 24.—Confirmation of the execution of the former Emperor of Russia and his wife and daughters under particularly revolting conditions by Bolshevist troops was given here today by General Robert C. Paris, one of the first French officers to be assigned to the Czechoslovak Army in Russia. General Paris is on his way home to make an official report of the occurrence to the French Government. He arrived here yesterday from Vladivostok.

Nicholas and his family were shot in the basement of their house at Ekaterinburg, Siberia. The women of the once royal family were subjected to indignities and mistreatment in the presence of the former Czar before the executions took place, General Paris said. The house is now the headquarters of General Gaida, a Czechoslovak commander.

Describing the scene attending the execution of the Romanoff family, General Paris said:

"Early one morning the Czar was taken from an upstairs room and stood against the wall in the basement of the house. There he was shot, after which the Czarina was shot, and then her daughters and other members of the household.

"A few days following the murder the bodies were taken under cover of night by automobiles into nearby villages, where they were cut into small pieces and burned separately. The charred remains were found by officers of the forces opposed to the Bolsheviki. Pieces of the burned clothing also were found. Proof that the garments were those of the Romanoffs was given by the fact that the diamonds which the Czarina and her daughters wore in their waists were picked up.

"The room in which the murder was committed is now sealed. The plaster on the walls shows where the rifle bullets penetrated. The bullets were removed with bayonet points. Bloodstains have been washed from the floor. Under the flooring, however, little pools of blood were found. In several places in the death room the blood seeped through the cracks in the floor.

"Every one in Russia is now thoroughly convinced the entire Romanoff household was wiped out by the Bolsheviki. The official reports sent to France were conclusive.

"The Czar and his family are dead. That is positive."

NEW RUSSIAN ORGAN HERE.

Struggling Russia Will Present the Democratic Point of View.

In order to acquaint American readers with the truth about Russia as it is seen by democratic educated Russians, who have unusual opportunities for observing the present and are thoroughly familiar with the past of their country in all its varied phases—political, economic, ethnic—the Russian Information Bureau, with headquarters in the Woolworth Building, has launched a weekly magazine called Struggling Russia.

The editor is A. J. Sack, the board of advisers contains thirty-eight names whose bearers have already registered their anti-Bolshevist sentiments. Among the Americans are Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia University, Lawrence F. Abbott, editor of The Outlook; George B. Cortelyou, President of the Consolidated Gas Company; Charles H. Boynton, President of the American-Russian Chamber of Commerce; George Kennan, Professor E. R. Seligman, J. G. Phelps-Stokes, Oscar S. Straus, Jacob H. Schiff, Mark Sullivan, and Edward N. Hurley, Chairman of the United States Shipping Board; and among the Russians P. A. Morozoff, the Russian Central War Industrial Committee; M. M. Oustinoff, Russian Consul General at New York; Professor P. V. Poliakoff, and A. N. Sakhnovsky, representatives of the All-Russian Zemstvos Union; S. A. Ughet, the Russian Embassy, and A. M. Volkoff, Russian Consul General at Chicago.

The object of Struggling Russia, as presented in the prospectus, is as follows: "This magazine stands for a democratic Russia, and will defend it against the red reaction of Bolshevism and the black reaction of Czarism. Every day of Bolshevism staying in power makes such a reaction more and more possible."

Among the contributors to the first number are "The Little Grandmother of the Revolution," Catherine Breshkovsky, on "What Is Bolshevism?" Alexander Kerensky, "Russia and the Allies"; Nicholas Tchaikovsky, "Russia and the Peace Conference," and A. A. Tilov, "The Voluntary Army in Southern Russia."

M. Tchiakovsky, who wrote immediately after the proposal was made for the conference at Prinkipo, tells why all the responsible Governments of Russia rejected the invitation of the Peace Conference and why the Bolsheviki accepted it: "They (the Bolsheviki) say that the Allies have capitulated before force."

Among the weekly features of the magazine will be a weekly cable letter from the well-known revolutionist, Vladimir Bourtseff, and the publication of documents. The present number contains extracts from anti-Bolshevist pamphlets suppressed by the Soviets, in which the growth of Bolshevism may be traced.

Apropos of current news is the greeting and expression of gratitude sent by the Omsk Government to the Czechoslovak army fighting the battle for democratic Russia in Siberia.

CALLED LILLE PLEA WICKED.

Germans Scolded Archbishop for Receiving It, Mgr. Charost Says.

PARIS, March 24.—Monsignor Alexis Charost, the Bishop of Lille, in a speech in Paris on Sunday, said that letters which he had written to the Archbishop of Cologne protesting against German acts at Lille were opened by the German military authorities and that the German prelate was scolded for corresponding with a French bishop "who wrote such wicked letters."

The Bishop described the cynical behavior of the Germans against the defenseless population of Lille and also the deportation of 7,000 residents of that city. He said that when he had protested to German churchmen, their attitude had been not to hear the cries of help from the victims of oppression.

KOLCHAK TROOPS WIN WEST OF URALS

CITIES' FEARFUL DEATH RATE

11 Per Cent. in Petrograd in February—Coffins Are Now Rented, Not Sold, in Moscow.

PARIS, March 24.—Siberian troops of the Kolchak Government have successfully begun an offensive west of the Urals on a line from Perm to the trans-Siberian Railway, advices from Omsk say. At certain points the Bolsheviki have been driven back more than thirty miles. The Siberians have captured Okansk, fifty miles southwest of Perm.

On a fifty-mile front between Okansk and Osa along the Kama River the Bolsheviki have been driven back twenty miles.

The Kolchak forces also are reported to have obtained marked success in the region of Birsk, northwest of Ufa.

Brief dispatches from Moscow announcing the death of Sverdloff, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the All-Russian Congress of Soviets, are causing much speculation among Russians in Paris, who are eagerly awaiting fuller details. His death is reported to have occurred on Feb. 16, after the convening of the Sixteenth Congress of Russian Soviets, which continues its meeting in Moscow.

Sverdloff was one of Lenine's strongest supporters. He presided at the opening of the Constituent Assembly and was a dominant figure as Chairman of the Executive Committee. He supported Lenine in his effort to check the power of commissions for the suppression of the counter-revolution which had been taking over the functions of the Soviets and threatening to supplant them.

More than 113,000 persons, or more than 11 per cent. of the entire population, died in Petrograd in February, according to Russian police statistics just received in Paris.

On Feb. 1 the total population of Petrograd was 990,000. In addition to the deaths during the month, 77,000 persons left Petrograd, and on March 1 the population was about 800,000.

American relief workers who left Moscow on Feb. 12 say that deaths in that city early in February averaged 4,000 daily. They say that conditions there were similar to those in Petrograd, where smallpox, typhoid, starvation, and the "hunger plague" were raging unchecked. Coffins are no longer sold in Moscow, but are only rented for use at funerals.

STOCKHOLM, March 24.—In addition to spotted fever and typhoid fever, Petrograd is being ravaged by smallpox, according to advices through Helsingfors. All the hospitals are crowded, and the mortality is increasing daily. The bodies of the dead are collected in big wooden cases and emptied into large graves, the cases then being returned to the hospitals, filled again, and the process repeated.

LONDON, March 24.—Forty British naval and military prisoners captured in Northern Russia are at present captives in Moscow, according to a British refugee just arrived from Russia.

The refugee says that the Bolsheviki apparently are trying to win the enlisted men over by giving tnem certain freedom, while imprisoning the officers in small cells. The men are allowed to circulate in Moscow and to visit British residents there. They are also better fed and clothed than the officers. Despite the Bolshevist efforts, the refugee says, the men show no signs of joining the Soviet ranks.

ON TRIAL FOR WAR EXPLOIT.

American Who Fought in Air on Visit to Front Faces Court.

LONDON, March 24.—The court-martial trial of Captain Edmund G. Chamberlain of San Antonio, Texas, an officer of the United States Marine Corps, the story of whose exploits in bringing down a number of German machines in an air battle while he was on a visit to the British front last July has been under investigation for some time, was begun at American Navy Headquarters here this morning. Captain Chamberlain was formally charged with "scandalous conduct tending to the destruction of good morals" and with "falsehood." He pleaded not guilty to the charges and specifications in each case.

Captain H. W. Harrison, U. S. N., presided over the court, which was composed of naval and marine officers. The defendant was represented by a civilian lawyer, D. Harper, assisted by Major S. Williams of the Marine Corps.

Lieut. Commander W. A. Edwards, Vice Admiral Sims's aid for aviation, told of receiving alleged official reports of the exploits, as they were widely published, and of preparing a letter for Admiral Sims, recommending Chamberlain for the Medal of Honor and promotion in rank. The letter was forwarded to Washington. He said the British Air Ministry began to doubt the truth of the exploits and investigated the matter last Fall.

The only other witness was Captain F. T. Evans, in command of the Poliac air station, who gave Chamberlain high praise as an aviator.

AMERICAN KILLED IN FIGHT WITH GERMANS

Another Wounded and Two Germans Stabbed in Clash in Coblenz Suburb.

COBLENZ, March 24, (Associated Press.)—American Army Headquarters today completed the investigation of the fight between three American soldiers and a number of German civilians at Gulz, a suburb of Coblenz, on March 16. In the fight one American private was stabbed to death and another was seriously wounded, while two Germans sustained stab wounds. These men, with several other Germans, are being held for trial.

The Americans contend the fight began when a German made remarks reflecting upon Americans, which were resented by the soldiers. The Germans maintain the Americans stopped them on the street, destroyed their individual permits, and attempted to separate a German girl from two companions, one of whom was her brother.

BERNSTEIN QUITS EXTREMISTS

Flays Independent Socialists for Russian Alliance.

BERLIN, March 21, (Associated Press.)—Eduard Bernstein, the veteran Independent Socialist leader, has definitely abandoned that party and has returned to the Majority Socialists. In "a parting greeting to the Independent Socialists," he administers a sharp castigation to that party, and discloses further details of its close alliance with the Russian Bolsheviki.

"In the Spring of 1918," Herr Bernstein writes, "a social gathering was held in the rooms of the Bolshevist Russian Embassy, members of this Embassy and of the Independent Socialist Party being present. I was invited, although I never concealed my opposition to the Bolshevist policy.

"Matters discussed at the meeting included the question as to the reason why the Independent Socialists did not proceed in a revolutionary manner as the Bolsheviki demanded, and in the debate which followed, Georg Ledebour explained that the party was unfortunately constituted in a different manner from the Bolsheviki."

Herr Bernstein's defection from the Independent Socialists, although nominally due to the party's recent decision forbidding its members to maintain relationships with any other party, is one of many indications that a large number of intellectuals among the Independent Socialists have been moved to resign from that party because of attacks made upon it by Gustav Noske, the German Minister of Defense, and other national leaders, and by disclosures of intimate relationships between at least a portion of the party and the German Bolsheviki.

It was reported in January that Herr Bernstein, who is an Under Secretary in the new German Government, had rejoined the Majority Socialists. When questioned as to this by Jean Longuet, the French Socialist leader, at the Berne International Socialist Conference in February, Bernstein said he was holding membership in both parties and trying to bring about a reconciliation between the warring Socialist factions.

BIG FOOD SHIPS SAIL.

The Auguste Vicitoria and Graf Waldersee Leave Hamburg.

BERLIN, March 23, (Associated Press.)—The German mercantile ships in the Harbor of Bremen were still in port today, but nine food ships left Hamburg during the day, in compliance with the shipping agreement with the Entente.

Among the steamers which sailed were the Auguste Victoria and the Graf Waldersee.

BAVARIA TO DISARM.

Gives Notice That She Will Furnish No More Troops to Germany.

ZURICH, March 24.—The Bavarian Minister of Foreign Affairs has informed the German Government that Bavaria will disarm her soldiers and henceforth will not furnish troops for the Empire.

SAYS ARMISTICE ENDED WAR

Federal Judge in Kentucky Disregards Contrary Official Advice.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., March 24.—Federal Judge Walter Evans, deciding a case which hinged upon an interpretation of when the European war ended, today decided that the "war was brought to a close when the armistice was signed," and that President Wilson "in an official speech" had made that declaration, upon which the cour predicated the decision.

Judge Evans refused to take cognizance of a teelgram from Attorney General Palmer to the effect that Congress declared was and only Congress could terminate it, as far as the United States is concerned by ratifying a treaty of peace, and brushed aside a quotation from Secretary of War Baker that the armistice meant only a cessation of hostilities.

The case at bar was that of a resident of Louisville charged with a violation of wartime military regulations.

ditions the people will hold the Government responsible for them.

Ebert Threatens Break on Danzig.

COPENHAGEN, March 24.—Germany cannot and will not sign a peace which involves the annexation of Danzig by Poland, President Ebert declared in a speech on Sunday, a dispatch from Berlin says. He added that Germany could not give up West Prussia or part of Upper Silesia.

Ebert spoke at a meeting called to protest against the annexation of Danzig by Poland. He said that Germany was prepared to agree to the neutralization of the Vistula, which would include Danzig as a free port.

AMSTERDAM, March 24.—A demonstration "against the violation of German territory under the peace treaty" was held in Berlin Sunday in front of the residence of President Ebert. After the meeting the crowd went to the Hotel Adlon, where most of the Entente missions in Berlin are quartered. Seeing American officers, they mistook them for British and shouted: "Down with Englnad!"

DANZIG ESSENTIAL TO POLES.

Without Port, Says Smulski, Poland Will Be a German Trading Post.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—Inclusion of Danzig and its hinterland within the new Polish State is indispensable to the establishment of a stable, independent, anti-Bolshevist Government, in the opinion of John F. Smulski, Polish Commissioner for the United States. Mr. Smulski said tonight:

"Without possession of Danzig, the new State will become a mere advanced trading post for Germany. It will be obliged to do its business through German merchants, German ports, and German banks, and make the best trades possible for its economic existence, which will mean the acceptance of terms subordinated to German commercial aggrandizement.

"The great Lodz textile industries which the Germans sought to destroy by dismantling the plants can only exist with a free sea entrance for the cotton required. The loss of Danzig will make this revival impossible. I am loath to give credence to intimations which I have found in the cabled news stories that the sudden distress over the possible denationalizing of the Germans within Polish territory is based on a fear that the Poles may build a rival cotton textile industry in their new land.

"The Poles, deprived of proper military assistance and denied even the use of their own army in France, although the recognized Polish Government has requested its presence, have for months now been resisting the Bolsheviki. The way has always been open to them to lift the red flag and make an immediate peace with their enemies and the enemies of civilization on the northeast at Vilna, and at the southeast at Lemberg. If their faith in the Allies is to be rewarded by the loss of Danzig, and the loss of territories necessary for the support of the Polish nation, Mr. Paderewski will have an enormous task laid upon his already heavily laden shoulders to resist the new turmoil.

"It is admitted that the boundary lines as suggested by the experts may include 1,000,000 Germans, although we regard even this as an exaggerated total, but the question can be properly raised as to which phase is most important, the possible inclusion of a million Germans or the commercial disenfranchisement of 30,000,000 Poles?"

Italians Reply to Arguments on Adriatic Claims.

PARIS, March 24.—The Italian delegation to the Peace Conference presented to the Supreme Council today a report in answer to the arguments advanced by the Jugoslavs in a recent memorandum respecting the territorial claims in dispute with Italy.

The report was compiled by Salvatore Barzilai, civil Governor of former Austrian territory occupied by Italy, and Signor Salata, an Istrian Deputy.

ROSSO IS CLEARED BY MILITARY COURT

YIELDED AFTER HARD FIGHT

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, March 23.—More than a year after the disaster at Caporetto, the trial has been begun before the military tribunal of the Fourth Army of those responsible for the Italian débacle of 1917.

General Benato Rosso, commander of the Arno Brigade, which was intrusted with the defense of the front line from Caporetto to Tolmino—in the very sector where the enemy broke through—appeared before his judges today. He was accused of abandoning his post of command without fighting to the utmost before surrendering. General Rosso categorically denied these accusations, swearing that the regiments under his command fought heroically.

He explained that while moving forward toward Kolovrat, a message reached him from the commander of the Second Army, enjoining him to send all transport to the rear and to keep himself ready to move his troops at a moment's notice. He said that, realizing that this meant to be prepared for withdrawal, and knowing that he would have to make wide-reaching dispositions, he returned to his post at Drenchia, where telephonic and telegraphic communication was good, and where he could more easily communicate with the high command for more precise orders.

But matters were precipitated; the enemy broke through the first-line trenches and succeeded in taking the Italians in the rear. The divisional headquarters ordered the withdrawal of the command, but the Arno regiments received orders from Rosso to resist to the utmost; and only when night fell, after having fought all day without being able to use their machine guns, through lack of ammunition, being surrounded, they surrendered.

The jury, after hearing General Rosso's defense and the testimony of many Generals, other high officers and soldiers, returned a verdict of "not guilty."

WANT ACTION ON REED.

Missouri Democrats Call for a Meeting of State Committee.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., March 24.—Forty Democratic members of the Missouri House of Representatives today drafted and signed a letter to Ben M. Neale, Chairman of the State Central Committee, urging that a meeting of the committee be called to determine whether a State convention shall be held to consider the position of United States Senator James A. Reed, whose criticism of the proposed League of Nations has occasioned opposition in the State Democratic circles.

PRESIDENT GIVES AID TO WAR RISK BUREAU

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—The War Risk Insurance Bureau, which came very near being seriously crippled when the last Congress failed to pass appropriation bills, has received an appropriation from President Wilson's emergency fund, and will be enabled to carry on its work, according to an official announcement made today. No mention was made of the sum allotted by the President, but the amount for which Secretary Glass asked the President by cable some time ago was $3,250,000, and the sum granted is thought to approximate that figure.

It is now said that the dismissal of thousands of employes contemplated by the bureau will be avoided, with perhaps the exception of the 2,000 or more "contract" employes whose services will be dispensed with by degrees. It was understood at one time that without the necessary money in hand, the bureau would have had to discharge about 6,000 to 10,000 persons.

With the new money on hand, salaries can be continued certainly until the new Congress makes a further appropriation, which will be asked for in a deficiency bill. At that time also Congress will have to look after the soldiers' allowances. At present there is sufficient money to pay the March and April, and possibly some portion of the May allowances. The money which the bureau will receive from President Wilson's fund will pay administrative expenses, but the allowances and the allotments—which latter are taken from soldiers' pay, and which the bureau handles—are taken care of through direct appropriations.

On March 13, when Secretary Wilson announced the reduction in the force of the United States Employment Service, he gave out a wireless message he had received from President Wilson, who had been appealed to for funds from his emergency fund for use in continuing the work of the Employment Bureau. President Wilson replied in that message that he regretted the discontinuance of the work of the Employment Bureau, "but the fact is that, including pledges made, my fund is practically exhausted," and what remained "would not suffice to maintain the bureau."

WILSON NEAR SHELL BURST.

Copyright, 1919, by The Chicago Tribune Co.

PARIS, March 14.—President and Mrs. Wilson went through a near barrage Sunday when motoring on the Chemin des Dames. French soldiers had gathered up hundreds of "dud" shells as well as other débris from the battlefield and set fire to it to discharge the shells.

The President's automobile was rolling along the highroad near Ostel when the detonation of shells was heard. The chauffeur made a hurried survey and found the smoke from the burning ammunition dump. The discharging shells continued rattling away every few minutes, and it was necessary for the party to make a détour to escape bursting shrapnel.

Both the President and Mrs. Wilson were highly interested in being under a "bombardment," but the President's wife showed no fear.

To Represent Army and Navy.

CONFERENCE CONTROL SHIFTS

the decision of the great powers today to make a big effort to have the peace treaty ready a week hence.

The final shaping of the peace terms, the correspondent adds, will be the sole subject of discussion between President Wilson and the Premiers within the next few days, and during that period it is not likely that the Supreme Council will meet.

"As one delegate puts it," the correspondent adds, "'it has become a race between peace and anarchy.'"

STUDY SENATE SPEECHES FOR LEAGUE CHANGES

Lodge-Lowell Debate Also a Text for Discussion Before Conference Commission.

PARIS, March 24.—The League of Nations Commission resumed its sessions at 8:30 o'clock tonight, President Wilson presiding.

The commission was expected to sit until midnight. It was not believed that the large number of amendments would be completed and the revision of the covenant concluded without another meeting.

The amendments have been divided into three classes: First, those by neutrals; second, those by an American Senator; third, those framed by President Wilson, Colonel House, and Lord Robert Cecil. The last named group includes all points which the framers of the instrument believe will clarify its meaning and satisfy objections in all quarters.

The text of the speeches of Senators Lodge and Knox and the main points of the recent debate between Senator Lodge and President Lowell are being gone over in shaping these changes.

According to reports President Wilson's view is that the two main obstacles to early conclusion of peace are reparations for war damages and the Franco-German Rhine frontier. The belief was expressed by those conversant with the President's view that this situation would be clearly and definitely presented to the Premiers, and, if need be, a suggestion would be made that they remain continuously together until these two difficulties were met and overcome.

The expectation also was advanced that any doubts, still remaining on the question whether the League of Nations would or would not go into the peace treaty, would be settled in some definite understanding among the Premiers who are the controlling influence of the conference.

The results of the deliberations of the Supreme Council today are not likely to be stated fully in official communiqués, and will probably take form in their effect on the conference work, particularly with respect to reparations, frontiers, and the League of Nations.

Advocates of the League of Nations maintain that it is in no way retarding the progress of the peace treaty, as the League meetings are held at night and are nearing a conclusion, whereas the obstacles to the treay are on questions of principle, on which the Premiers thus far have been unable to reach an agreement.

THOUSANDS THRONG 5TH AV. AT NIGHT

MOURNING NOTE AT LIBRARY

Historic Thoroughfare Is Transformed Into Sea of Welcoming Decorations.

Fifth Avenue last night, from Washington Arch to Sixtieth Street was a modern fairy land of color and illumination, a blazing golden way. Thousands upon thousands of people thronged the streets admiring the decorations that blazoned a welcome to New York's soldier sons. The people surged out to the middle of the road and a never ending stream of automobiles packed with sightseers threaded its way up and down the historic thoroughfare.

The crowds moved slowly, scanning the multitudinous decorations which intrigued the eye every few steps. To the old whose memery of parades ran back to the time when New York's troops returned from the civil war the occasion, from the festive outward aspect, appeared without precendent. The people passed up and down the avenue on the tiptoe of expectancy.

Great whirlpools of men and women surged about the Victory Arch at Madison Square, passed up the street to the Court of the Heroic Dead at the Public Library and continued to the Arch of the Jewels at the Plaza. Lights of more than 100,000,000 candle power turned night into day, while at the three places of honor additional lights of great brilliancy shone on the work of the sculptors and decorators.

When sunset came and the dinner hour passed the first of the night crowds from all parts of the city, from the clubs and hotels, the tenements and the apartments, assembled on the ground that the 27th Division will tread today. At 9 o'clock last night the vicinity of the Public Library was as thick with people as on the night of the false report of the signing of the armistice. It took fifteen minutes to go from Forty-second Street to Fortieth Street while the jam of humanity risked its limbs in the middle of the road.

A Maze of Decortions.

Shops and offices on Fifth Avenue were studded with decorations of flags and "Welcome Home" signs, and hundreds bore improvised stands for the benefit of employes and friends. Outside the Fifth Avenue district stores and business houses were especially adorned with flags of the Allies and with unique decorations.

In front of the Hotel Astor a huge American Eagle, gold painted and measuring about forty feet from the tip of one wing to the other, craned his head aggressively toward the passing crowds. The Hotel Claridge had an electric sign consisting of an inverted green horse show in the centre, flanked by two American flags on either side and words of welcome in the centre. Stores, shops, homes, clubs, and every habitable place in the city bore at least one welcoming sign, and many in addition bore the yellow banner of the 27th with the constellation of Orion.

Others Did Well, Says O'Ryan, Thanking City for Its Welcome

Major Gen. John F. O'Ryan issued this letter yesterday:

The officers and men of the 27th Division have been quite overwhelmed by the kindness of the reception given upon our arrival and since our arrival in New York. We are greatly impressed by the plans of the State and municipal authorities in connection with the parade. The entertainments and other features of the homecoming provided by the Mayor's Committee of the City of New York have afforded our officers and men great pleasure and their appreciation is keen.

I think it is due the officers and men of the division to say that while they are proud of their record they realize that they were not the only combat division of the American Army which did well in Europe, for there were many others. Many of our officers and men have expressed the hope that the people of New York will give a rousing welcome to other divisions as they return, and more particularly to our own 77th Division and to the Rainbow Division, in which we are so handsomely represented by the gallant 69th.

We stand ready with our armories, equipment, and enthusiasm to aid in every way adequate receptions for the other homecoming divisions. JOHN F. O'RYAN,
Major General.

The Court of the Heroic Dead in front of the Public Library stood out like a bas relief last night under the searching glare of incandescent lights turned on it from the opposite side of the street. The spectators saw two pylons bearing the shields decorated with the insignia of American divisions and upstanding spears. Between the pylons, standing quite alone, was the key piece of the decoration, a maroon transparency of net bordered with gold and bearing in three rows of golden letters the names of the heroic battles participated in by the American troops. Above the battle names appeared the words of Abraham Lincoln's letter to Mrs. Bixby consoling her on the death of her sons in the war. The words, read last night by some whose sons made the supreme sacrifice, were:

"I feel how weak and fruitless must be any words of mine which should attempt to beguile you from a grief so overwhelming. I pray that our Heavenly Father may assuage the anguish of your bereavement and leave you only the cherished memory of the loves lost and the golden pride that must be yours to have laid so costly a sacrifice on the altar of freedom."

To Honor the Dead.

Impressive ceremonies that will mark the sacrifice made in the war will take place at this place today, when siv civil war veterans will remove from a catafalque a laurel wreath and place it at the foot of the roll of honor on which is inscribed the valorous deeds of the American soldiers.

Straight and white the pylons stood out in Madison Square last night, while great numbers of men, women, and children gazed at the bas-relief of each branch of the service inscribed on each of the pillars. The Victory Arch was finished last night, and stood out like a fine wrought structure of alabaster. The pylons look toward the Victory Arch, and are joined together in pairs by green garlands. Swinging above the arch and in front and in the rear are large round balloons decorated with varicolored pennants, and attached to the pylons by colored ribbons. Swaying slightly in the breeze the balloons heightened the touch of unreality to the scene. Practically all the scaffolding was removed from the arch by sunset last night, making visible the giant figures on the arch. Especially thrilling to the spectators last night appeared the group of six plunging horses designed by Paul Bartlett.

The three phases of the decorations were evident last night. At the Public Library with the Court of the Honored Dead a mourning note was struck, while victory was the motif at the Victory Arch, and joy and thankfulness at the Arch of Jewels at Sixtieth Street. Thousands and thousands of crystal prisms gave out the colors of the rainbow last night at the jeweled portal, which consists of an arch of two shafts, each eighty feet high, the portal itself being 130 feet wide. About 32,000 pieces of prisms in ruby, jonquil, olivine and ultramarine blue surround a sunburst of 9,000 pieces to bring out the coat-of-arms of the Allies.

Great beams of light were thrown on the Arch of Jewels by several dozen searchlights equipped with parabolic reflectors. The total candlepower at this point was said to be 96,000,000. and successively the great shafts of light from the searchlights turned the Arch of Jewels into various colors. The vista beyond the Arch of Jewels is a great grandstand stretching to 110th Street, where the parade will disband.

New York's hotels were beseiged last night by guests from out of town and many who had not engaged rooms in advance were disappointed. Space was at a premium, and visitors were glad to accept accommodations in quarters they would have spurned at any other time. Not only the hotels but the cafés, restaurants, and theatres were crowded by hosts of people. The subways, elevated trains, and surface cars were packed to the doors all evening with people who came from all parts of the city to walk on Fifth Avenue or Broadway. Street hawkers shrilled their wares, selling "Welcome Home" buttons, ribbons, flags, and decorations of all kinds.

CRITICISES TICKET DELAY.

Major Neergaard Assails Mayor's Committee for Late Delivery.

Major Charles F. Neergaard, in charge of Debarkation Hospital No. 5, in the Grand Central Palace. criticised the Mayor's Committee of Welcome last night for delaying delivery of tickets to wounded soldiers, for whom seats had been provided in various stores through an arrangement with the Fifth Avenue Association. Major Neergaard said:

"A week ago members of the Fifth Avenue Association provided seats for 500 wounded soldiers in different stores along the line of parade and the lists of seating places were sent to the Mayor's Committee for the issue of the necessary official tickets. This hospital needed these additional seats to take care of all of its 2,300 patients, and the delay in getting the tickets compelled us to find other seats for the wounded men.

"A messenger from the Mayor's office brought me the tickets at 7:45 o'clock tonight—too late to be of any service to the men here and too late for proper distribution even if we could use them. I want to thank the members of the Fifth Avenue Association for their efforts to provide these seats, and also to apologize on behalf of the hospital for being unable to use them because of the delay in getting the tickets."

At the same time the Mayor's Committee sent 500 tickets to Debarkation Hospital No. 3, at Sixth Avenue and Eighteenth Street. The secretary of Major Lamont said these tickets would be used and that they would try to get the transfer of the 500 others sent to Major Neergaard, as thus far they had only 2,500 tickets for the 4,000 men in this hospital. Among them are thirty soldiers of Major Gen. O'Ryan's 27th Division.

CROWDS FOR PARADE FILL CITY'S HOTELS

COME IN SPECIAL TRAINS

Every Railroad Terminal Jammed with Friends and Soldiers Seeking Each Other.

It was estimated last night that perhaps half a million persons who expect to witness the parade today had come to New York from out of town—from the cities and villages up the State, whose men went to war in the 27th Division. All day yesterday at the Grand Central Terminal, the Pennsylvania Station, and other railroad terminals train after train rolled in carrying the throngs.

New York's hotels, already painfully crowded this season, where lack of war-time building and increase of post-war business has put living accommodations at a high premium, were packed to the point where even the best friend of the manager would have been hard put to it to get a place to sleep.

From Gloversville and from Jamestown, from Ogdensburg and from Troy, the visitors began coming at an early hour yesterday. Late last night the weary clerks were still saying, "Sorry, sir, but there is not room enough in this hotel for another guest. If we let another person in the Fire Marshal and the health inspector will both be after us."

Numbers of persons, as it grew later and later, and miles of streets covered in a fruitless canvass of hotels and boarding houses convinced them of the uselessness of their quest, made their way to Jersey City, Newark and other outlying points.

At the Hotel Biltmore, Manager William H. Rorke said he believed the crowd in the city to be the very largest that ever visited New York. He said that the nearest approaches were during the Dewey and Hudson-Fulton celebrations.

"If the boys had as much trouble breaking the Hindenburg line as I am having trying to locate a place to sleep in this town," said a lawyer of an up-State city yesterday, while he rested his weary feet on one of the benches in front of the arch near the Public Library, "then they deserve everything and more than we can do for them."

Good-Natured Crowd in Streets.

Notwithstanding this difficulty of finding lodgings it was a happy, good-natured crowd that thronged the streets yesterday, wandering up and down Fifth Avenue, congregating in crowds to try to read the 27th's honor roll of battles in front of the Library, or turning to stare at the men in olive drab, and sometimes stopping the men, for New York took every man in uniform straight to its heart to inquire of his experience or about some relative or friend in the A. E. F.

Every once in a while in the midst of the crowd of cheerful, smiling faces one would see a man or woman, or perhaps a couple, whose sober glances and sad eyes told the story even if the black band with its gold star were not in evidence.

Grand stands were inspected yesterday by thousands of persons who hold tickets, and also by many thousands less fortunate who would like to have tickets. In several cases ticket holders, viewing with dismay the size of the crowd compared to the number of seats, thought that if the night were not cold it would be wiser to "camp out" and take no chances of missing a seat.

On the special trains which came to town from up-State cities were delegations from Binghamton, Oneonta, Saratoga, and Albany.

"We are going to give the old 3d Regiment of Rochester, now a part of the 27th Division, a rousing welcome," said Mayor Hiram Edgerton, who, with George Eastman of the Eastman Kodak Company, heads the Rochester delegation. "But I can tell you one thing, and that is, there will be a more rousing welcome when we get those boys back in Rochester. After this parade we're coming down here again and take our boys home in a special train."

The Rochester delegation made the Hotel Commodore their headquarters. They occupied an entire floor in the big hotel. At the Biltmore was a large delegation from Buffalo. The Belmont had many folk from out of town, including a number of Canadians from Montreal and Toronto. At the Manhattan and the Murray Hill, visitors from Westchester County seemed to predominate.

Crowds at Railroad Stations.

At the railroad stations the crowds were banked chiefly around the information booths, at which a half dozen perplexed attendants were kept busy answering queries.

"Can you beat it?" said an overworked clerk at the information bureau at the Grand Central, pausing a moment. "I'll bet everybody in this State who hoped to meet a boy here today arranged to meet him right in front of this bureau. About a thousand people have asked me if I have seen a young, good-looking soldier around here. They say I will know him because he will be in uniform."

Around the bureau, the crowd, composed about equally of men and women trying to find soldiers, and of soldiers waiting to be found, swayed back and forth.

PLANS TO FEED MARCHERS.

Y. M. C. A. to Distribute Lunch Boxes—To Care for Wounded.

While the city was making an effort to adjust itself to conditions yesterday, the organizations which make it their business to care for the soldier were not idle. The parade of a division is a big undertaking, and, with the wounded and shell-shock patients to be cared for as well as the thousands and thousands of boys, many of them strangers in the city, officials of the Y. M. C. A., the Knights of Columbus, the War Camp Community Service, the Motor Corps of America, and the Salvation Army were busy up to a late hour last night.

The Y. M. C. A. plans to distribute 30,000 lunch boxes to the men immediately after the paraders break ranks, and also to serve hot food to the 1,000 band musicians stationed along the line of march. Two field kitchens have been lent to the Y. M. C. A. by the Government for this purpose.

The K. of C. has baked 50,000 cakes which will be distributed tonight at the various armories to the marching men. Secretaries who served with the division in Flanders will supervise this service. Twenty girls, employed at the Knights of Columbus War Activities Department will shower flowers on the wounded men in the parade as they are driven past St. Patrick's Cathedral.

The women in the Motor Corps of America will be busy all day long. Under command of Major Helen Bastedo, they will drive the wounded and the shell-shock patients from the hospital to the grandstand. Some of the wounded will be driven in the parade by members of the corps. There will be 100 motor corps women on duty, and they will drive more than 1,000 disabled men.

The War Camp Community Service has taken upon its shoulders the care of the wounded of the 27th Division who are coming from hospitals outside New York City. The men will be met at the railroad stations by Red Cross ambulances and driven to the quarters prepared for them. They will be housed as follows:

West End Presbyterian Church, 300 wounded; St. Bartholomew's Church, 60; Pershing House, 35; Mrs. George T. Bliss's home, 103; Neighborhood Club, 23 East Eleventh Street, 100; Volunteers of America, 30; National Lutheran Service Club, 25; St. Michael's Episcopal Church, 48; Masonic Sea and Field Club, 80; St. Mark's Episcopal Church, 50; Grace Church Parish House, 50; St. Nicholas's Church, 50; Y. M. H. A., 50; Temple Beth-El, 100, and Unit No. 5 of the Community Service will house all the others.

The wounded men will come from Oswego, East View, Rahway, Lakewood, Camp Dix, Washington, Cape May, Philadelphia, Boston, Camp Devens, Baltimore, Camps Upton and Merritt, Niagara Falls, Geneva, Ogdensburg, Gloversville, Olean, Buffalo, Tonawanda, Syracuse, Utica, Binghamton, and Ilion.

and city will make up the official reviewing party. It will be after 3 o'clock when the Red Cross unit, the last in the line, passes the reviewing party.

At intervals of twenty-five minutes all units will halt for a rest of five minutes, and then the men will be at ease. On the minute of every hour and half hour the signal will be given for this rest and the division will halt as a unit. During these rest periods for the troops the crowds in the grandstands are to take their "seventh inning stretches," and there is to be no objection if they chat with the soldiers. While marching the troops will be under strict discipline.

The regiments will march broken into half-battalion units, equivalent to two infantry companies to the unit. The lines will have about twenty-five men across their fronts and only a step will separate the lines of these half-battalion units, so that it will be impossible for relatives in the grandstands to single out soldiers in whom they are interested. A space of twenty-five feet will separate these half battalions, and the same space will intervene between the last rank of a regiment and the first line of the following unit.

None of the artillery regiments will have field pieces, because all this heavy equipment was turned in before the division left France, and none of the machine-gun battalions will have their weapons. The individual soldier will have only part of the equipment used by him in France. He will march with light pack, full canteen, gas mask slung at hip, rifle or sidearms, overcoat, and helmet of dark green color displaying the division insignia. All this equipment, except the gas masks, was brought from France.

Each unit will carry a placard or guidon, so that those who are watching the parade will be able to pick out the regiments or the companies that stormed Guillemont Farm or performed some notable feat in the operations as part of the British armies. Preceding the units of the division will be a symbolic tribute to the dead in the form of a caisson and a huge service flag with a star for each one of the 1,980 men who perished in the service overseas with the division. This is the order of march:

As the units of the division pass the reviewing stand of General O'Ryan at 110th Street they will be withdrawn from Fifth Avenue to the side streets and then assigned to means of transportation to take them back to their armories or to places where they will divest themselves of their equipment, so that they may proceed to the hotels where dinners are to be served to them in the evening. By this time it will be more than six hours since the soldiers had eaten, and the Salvation Army announced last night that it intended to distribute 50,000 "Château-Thierry doughnuts" and as many cups of coffee and chocolate. More than twenty workers began the preparation last evening at the Salvation Army headquarters in Fourteenth Street, and it was announced that among those who would distribute the doughnuts would be some of the girls who won fame by handing them out at Château-Thierry.

After the soldiers of the division have finished their dinners and entertainments in the hotels those who have homes in the city will be permitted to stay away from their armories for the night. Those from other cities will be expected to return to the armories, but officers said they expected there would be much consideration shown in the enforcement of this rule.

Six hundred West Point cadets who are to act as the guard of honor at the reviewing stand will arrive in this city on a special train at 8 o'clock this morning, it was announced last night by the Mayor's Committee. They will march up Fifth Avenue to their post in front of the Metropolitan Museum, with an escort of mounted policemen. After the division has passed in review the cadets will be the guests of the city at luncheon at the Biltmore. It was pointed out by the Mayor's Committee that this will be the first time since the Dewey celebration that the West Pointers have accepted an invitation to attend an official function in this city.

Hundreds of relatives of soldiers who had served in the division called at the headquarters of the Mayor's Committee in the Hall of Records to inquire whether tickets had been sent to them. The crowd around the door of the committee headquarters was so large that policemen had to stand guard, admitting claimants one by one. Many women were in tears as they struggled to push their way through the crowd in their effort to press their claims for tickets. As their claims were verified by the official records tickets were issued to them. In many cases the tickets were sent out to the emergency addresses on the official division records, and the relatives did not receive them because they had changed their residences.

POLICE PREPARE FOR CROWD.

More than 5,000 patrolmen will form police lines throughout the line of march today, and about 500 detectives will be scattered through the crowds to preserve order and to prevent congestion at spots reserved for the wounded or for veterans of other wars. The traffic regulations follow:

All traffic will be diverted from Fifth Avenue between Fifth Street and 120th Street after 8 o'clock this morning. No encroachment will be permitted either on the roadway or the sidewalk at any time.

All of Fifth Avenue except between Eighteenth and Twentieth Streets and Twenty-third and Twenty-fifth Streets and Fortieth and Forty-second Streets, will be open to the public between the curb line and the building line.

Police Inspector O'Brien of the Traffic Division, who will be in general charge of the 10,000 men along the line, requests that persons desiring to cross Forty-second Street at Fifth Avenue do so by using the shuttle subway service to Times Square and the Grand Central Terminal or else one of the nearby streets designated for limited traffic uses.

These traffic streets have been designated by the police as follows: Eastbound traffic, Sixteenth, Twenty-second, Twenty-sixth, Thirty-second, Thirty-sixth, Thirty-eighth, Forty-fourth, Fiftieth, Fifty-eighth; westbound traffic, Fifteenth, Twenty-first, Twenty-seventh, Thirty-third, Thirty-fifth, Thirty-ninth, Forty-third, Forty-ninth, and Fifty-seventh Streets.

Persons holding grand stand tickets must approach the section of the stand in which they are to be seated through the cross street indicated on each ticket. No spectators will be permitted west of Madison Avenue between Fifty-ninth and 110th Streets until 9:30 A. M. except those provided with grand stand tickets. After that hour the public will be allowed to occupy the easterly sidewalk of the Avenue except where the West Point Cadet guard of honor will be located.

The police also have orders to reserve for the wounded soldiers the following corners on the east side of Fifth Avenue: Forty-fifth Street, Forty-sixth Street, Forty-seventh Street, Forty-eighth Street, Fifty-first Street, and Fifty-second Street; and the following corners on the west side: Forty-ninth Street, Fifty-third Street, and Fifty-fourth Street. At other places automobiles carrying the wounded soldiers will be parked, and the east side of Fifth Avenue between Seventy-ninth and Eighty-fifth Streets will be reserved for the West Point Cadets, who are to act as guard of honor. Inspector O'Brien will have his headquarters at Eightieth Street and Fifth Avenue.

After 9:30 the police lines will be withdrawn from Madison Avenue to Fifth Avenue, and any crowds may follow the lines in to the east side of Fifth Avenue, where they may stand along the walks, in accordance with the reservations made in the special police regulations.

CITY GIVES FLAG TO O'RYAN.

American Colors Presented at Dinner to 27th's Officers.

New York City last night presented General John F. O'Ryan, commander of the 27th Division, with a great American flag in token of the splendid work done by his division on the fields of Flanders. In accepting the flag, which was given him by Rodman Wanamaker, Chairman of the Mayor's Committee, at the close of a dinner in honor of the General and 700 of his officers, General O'Ryan said:

"On behalf of the 27th Division, I accept these colors and I pledge you the best that is in all of us and the best in our successors to preserve this flag and to remain in honorable relation to the colors."

The dinner, which was attended by about a thousand guests, was the official expression of New York City's gratitude to the officers of the 27th Division, from General O'Ryan to the youngest Lieutenant, for the magnificent work the division did side by side with the British in breaking the Hindenburg line. In addition to General O'Ryan, Mayor Hylan and Governor Alfred E. Smith were the guests of honor. Mr. Wanamaker presided.

Mayor Hylan in a brief address told General O'Ryan how glad the city was to welcome him home.

"You were told the Hindenburg line was impregnable," said Mayor Hylan, "but it crumbled before the bravery and ability of the 27th Division. When you sailed we knew you'd make good and you have done so. It is needless for me to try and say how proud we are of you. Your division took the most difficult assignment, and that you made good is attested by the fact that your men are wearing decorations of France, Great Britain, and the United States."

Governor Smith followed Mayor Hylan, welcoming General O'Ryan in the name of the State of New York.

"It is my task," said the Governor, "to attempt to extend a welcome from the State of New York to the 27th Division. That, of course, is impossible. Even if I had time, I would not dare to try it. However, I think it safe to say that the State of New York itself will be here tomorrow to say its own welcoming speech."

Governor Smith in the course of his remarks paid a compliment to the work of the Mayor's Committee which had charge of the arrangements for the dinner. After he had finished, Rodman Wanamaker presented General O'Ryan with the flag in the name of the City of New York. The flag was carried the length of the hall by Police Lieut. William Kennel and escorted by a squad of police.

Mr. Wanamaker then presented to General O'Ryan for Mrs. O'Ryan, on behalf of the City of New York, a ruby-sapphire and diamond brooch in the form of a bowknot, the jewels showing the national colors.

The glee club and the band from the Police Department were present at the dinner. After the dinner General O'Ryan and his officers were taken in buses to the Century Theatre, where they witnessed the first performance of "Let's Beat It," the musical comedy put on by the 27th Division.

An Exceptional Opportunity For a Competent Copywriter

We want to engage another finished copywriter; a man of the type that now makes up our organization; a man of thorough training and mature experience; a man who knows his medium and can unfailingly command it

We want the type of man who appreciates the seriousness of speaking for another business than his own; a man who depends for his decisions upon knowledge rather than upon opinion, a man who can extend to and invite from other men a true spirit of coöperation; a man who can adequately represent us and the work we are trying to perform

To such a man we offer a place in an organization where the only demand upon him will be good work, an association with other men of the character we seek to duplicate, an intelligent and sympathetic interest in every deserving endeavor, an opportunity which from the standpoint of income and influence will be as great as any ability he may demonstrate.

If you think you are the man we want write us for an interview, and in your first letter give us complete details of your experience, your work and yourself.

BROOKLYN GREETS ITS OWN VETERANS

Borough's Sons in Twenty-seventh Division March Through Flag-Bedecked Streets.

FEELING OF AWE IN CROWD

PARADES IN OTHER PARTS

Various Units Cheered by Throngs on Way to Armories Throughout City.

Brooklyn turned out more than half a million persons yesterday to see the parade of the Brooklyn boys who, on Sept. 27 of last year, helped make the first deep crack in the Hindenburg line. Other sections of the 27th Division from New York City, who smashed the greatest German defensive system and started the German Army staggering into the series of crushing defeats in the last six weeks of the war, were reviewed by great crowds in Manhattan and the Bronx.

The crowds which banked the streets on the line of march and overflowed deeply into the cross streets in Brooklyn yesterday were by far the greatest which have ever gathered there. All available space on the pavements, in the windows, on the roofs, and wherever human figures could perch was taken. From Atlantic Avenue, and Bedford Avenue, on through Park Place, to Flatbush Avenue, then to Prospect Park Plaza, and along Prospect Park West to Sixteenth Street—in all about three miles of thoroughfare—was a mass of welcomers.

The "wild men," as the Brooklyn soldiers who first swarmed over the Bellecourt tunnel sector were described in diaries found on captured and dead Germans, marched beneath a veritable canopy of American flags, banners, and welcoming ribbons, fluttering brilliantly in a light wind and under a bright sun.

March as if to Front.

In this setting, the appearance of the survivors of the Brooklyn organizations who had made glorious history for America in the greatest of wars was more than impressive. The brilliant spectacle, personal greetings from friends and relatives, and that general enthusiasm from the admiring and proud people of Brooklyn did not in the least change the grim-visaged features of the men who were marching. The Brooklyn people saw their sons as they might have seen them marching on their way to the front. As if deaf and blind to what was taking place on both sides of them, they continued to wear steadfast, dignified expressions, and the straight lines cut into their faces by facing death and dealing it and seeing their comprades drop were not relaxed by the pleasure which they must have felt at the reception.

The crowd started to make a big demonstration when the first of the veterans appeared. All through the line of march the crowd broke forth with enthusiasm when the first of the veterans of this war passed before them. They started up and shouted and waved innumerable flags. Thousands of children, gay with ribbons and waving banners, were lifted up.

The soldiers, however, marched on with only the slightest outward signs that they were taking notice of this. Their heads did not waver from their normal military line of vision. A few glanced with the eyes only. One or two in a file gave a slight movement of the head and swept the crowd for a second. An occasional marcher failed to reach the standard of severe facial control and let his teeth flash in a quick but highly satisfied smile.

Crowd Shows Awe.

These stern countenances struck a kind of awe into the crowd. One glance was enough to show that these were men just returned from bloody battlefields, with their experiences stamped on their features. They were men who, after nearly two years of iron discipline, carried themselves with the same imperturbable and indifferent manner in the home town as on a French battlefield. Marching before the great crowd was apparently merely a minor incident in a military career. It was very different from the delirious scenes of triumphant processions that are imagined.

After their first outburst had failed to awaken the slightest apparent recognition from the military machine which was moving before it, the crowd checked itself suddenly, as if embarrassed and conscious of having been overeffusive. The applause and cheering were not entirely subdued, but the throngs on both sides of the street were very much sobered. There were outbursts in spots when a group on the sidewalk or in the long stands recognized an individual and cheered him, while hundreds of strangers joined in to make the ovation for the individual worth while. There were some big personal tributes when the line of march happened to take a boy through his own neighborhood, where occasionally signs with "Welcome Home, Albert," or some other family greeting was extended in big black letters.

Sense of Sadness Evident.

But on the whole the crowd borrowed a good deal of gravity from the soldiers. There were many reminders that the occasion was mixed with sadness. All the boys in a family enlisted together in many cases in the former New York National Guard regiments, which composed the units which paraded—the 106th Infantry, the 104th and 106th Machine Gun Battalions, and the 105th Field Artillery. A number of these boys came back with black bands on their sleeves. On all sides in the crowd were mothers and fathers with gold stars.

The 106th Infantry, which fought under Colonel Frank W. Ward, who rode at the head of the unit yesterday, was one of the most heavily affected of all the regiments. Its glorious part in the breaking of the German defensive arch was not accomplished without serious loss. Six hundred and sixty members of the regiment were killed in action or died of wounds, and the regiment suffered a total of 1,833 major casualties. The casualties were not light in the machine gun companies, which crumpled German counter-attacks on the Hindenburg line, or in the 105th Artillery, which played a big part in strengthening the St. Mihiel salient and which is credited with having fired more shots into the Kriemhilde Stellung line than any other unit.

No Pomp or Glitter.

Surprised and somewhat appalled by the appearance of the world-famous soldiers who had left a few months before as untried Brooklyn boys, the men and women in the crowd seemed to study the marchers with nervous eagerness. One of the most striking impressions was the absence of pomp and glitter about the troops.

The colors adopted to prevent the Germans from detecting soldiers at a distance robbed the crowd of many of the eye-filling and spirit-stirring appurtenances of martial spectacles of the past. The heavy coat of dull paint on the helmets took the flash and sparkle out of the scene. The bayonets were fixed, but even they threw off an artificially dimmed reflection. The machine gunners carried heavy packs, and their guns were moved in knock-down condition in cases.

Between the two banks of color, as brilliant as colored silk and bunting, gay dresses, pretty girls, and myriads of beribboned children could make it, the stern-faced men, clad in the sober olive drab and bearing their battle equipment, looked more formidable than ever. It was a stern line; there was a gesture of the grimness that won and not of the jubilation of victory. The men were bigger in physique than they were when last seen in Brooklyn, built up and developed until, with their fighting gear, they looked like a generation of giants. They had the neck and shoulders of wrestlers. Throughout the whole column of 5,000 veterans, who marched under discipline, the impression was of powerful physiques and strong faces.

Military Power Revealed.

The fascination in looking at a tremendous military power, preserved intact under unrelenting discipline, suddenly was lost as behind the marching veterans came men already mustered out and wounded men and convalescents no longer under discipline. The contrast was sharp.

The crowd cheered and laughed when two dogs, regimental mascots, wearing uniform capes with service stripes and one with a wound stripe, came along. It voiced gayety for a moment when a young goat, serving the same capacity, appeared. But the spell of the grim fighters was not entirely broken until the veterans who were no longer under discipline came along. These were Brooklyn men from the Rainbow Division, the Camp Upton division, and a number of others, including the Marines. Some had been mustered out and others were convalescents able to walk. They marched along in the rear of the disciplined ranks, smoking, chatting shrouting, and waving at friends. Brooklyn hospitality had been lavished upon them before they started to march and at periods during the marching to such an extent that most of them were loaded with doughnuts, buns, candy, and sausages.

Use Gifts as Grenades.

They had eaten all they wanted by the time they neared the official reviewing stand at Prospect Park and Ninth Street and were using the surplus as missiles. During a stop just before they arrived in front of Governor Smith, Mayor Hylan, and other officials, a heavy battle broke out. Edible ammunition was grabbed off the ground and thrown over and over again.

A division of bluejackets followed under command of officers, but the temptation to take a part in the skirmish was irresistible. A shower of abandoned food from the bluejackets took the irregular infantry by surprise. Sharp commands from their officers restored order occasionally, but scattering sausages and buns continued to fly from their ranks.

The next group was composed of several hundred wounded men, riding in buses, automobiles of the Women's Motor Corps, limousines and touring cars. Each of these men had several days' rations of outdoor food, which they hurled at one another, at the irregular marchers or at the crowd, sometimes running up alongside the curb to toss handfuls of food into the grandstand. They had a joyous time exchanging compliments and jibes one at another. Some of the most enthusiastic in welcoming their own and their neighbors' sons were old residents of Brooklyn who spoke with strong German accents.

The order of the parade was as follows:

Then will follow on trains in rapid succession the remainder of the quota asigned here, and by late afternoon the complete quartering will have been attended to.

SOLDIERS MISS MATINEES.

Troop Movements Keep 27th Men from Shows Arranged for Them.

The players in seventeeen Broadway shows were ready and waiting at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon to proceed with the free matinée performances for members of the 27th Division, a feature of the welcome which the Mayor's Sub-Committee on Military Affairs had been planning for the last three weeks, but only six of the playhouses drew audiences from "New York's Own." After waiting for the soldier-audiences until 3 o'clock, and even later, the other theatres called off the performances.

When the soldiers did not appear at the hour appointed by the Mayor's Committee, which had prepared a special form of admission ticket and made arrangements for those who wished to go to the matinée to march to the theatres under command of their officers, the managers became uneasy, and several of them communicated with the Mayor's Sub-Committee. They were informed that the tickets had been distributed to each unit of the division and that the carrying out of the matinée plans rested with division officers.

Major Gen. John F. O'Ryan, with members of his staff, attended the performance of "Lightnin'" at the Gaiety, which has a seating capacity of 850, but only 300 of his command took in the show. These were members of the Headquarters Troop and the Military Police, units which got in early from camp. Only twenty soldiers had appeared at the Gaiety at 2 o'clock. The soldiers, when they arrived a half hour or so later, evidently were under the impression that the performance was not to begin until 3 o'clock.

"A Sleepless Night" at the Bijou and "East Is West" at the Astor drew fair crowds of 27th men, but only a baker's dozen appeared at the Longacre, the Playhouse, and the Princess Theatres.

The performance of "Friendly Enemies" at the Hudson was held up until shortly before 3 o'clock, and then the four soldiers who made up the audience were directed to one of the other houses. The Morosco management was ready to ring up the curtain on "Cappy Ricks" at the hour set by the Mayor's Sub-Committee, but only two soldiers and one sailor made up the audience.

Not a man appeared at the performances of "Tea for Three" at the Maxine Elliott Theatre or the Manhattan Opera House, and the performances at the Eltinge, Booth, Criterion, Hudson, Fulton, and Republic Theatres were called off after only a row or two of seats had been filled. A. H. Woods also canceled "Redemption," with John Barrymore, at the Plymouth.

Captain James S. Wadsworth, Commander of the Headquarters Troop of the 27th, explained at division headquarters in the Hotel Biltmore that he had distributed the tickets to the different commands and got receipts for them from the commanders on Sunday. Delays incident to the moving of troops from the camp into the city had not been taken into consideration, he said. Several of the units did not reach their armories until late in the afternoon.

HOME MEN HAILED ON WAY FROM CAMP

THOUSANDS ON SIDEWALKS

Gov. Smith and Other Officials Review Them at the Union League Club.

The city extended its first greeting yesterday to the returning soldiers of the 105th Machine Gun Battalion, composed of elements of old Squadron A, of the National Guard, and the 107th Regiment, composed of elements of the old 7th and 1st Infantry Regiments, as they marched up Fifth Avenue on their way to their armories.

A greeting also was extended to the 105th Infantry as it marched from the Long Island ferry at East 34th Street to the 71st Regiment Armory, and to the 22d Engineers, who were reviewed by Brigadier General Cornelius Vanderbilt as they marched to their armory at Fort Washington Avenue and 168th Street.

One of the first units to arrive in Manhattan yesterday was the 105th Machine Gun Battalion. It was met at the East Thirty-fourth Street ferry by Squadron A of the New York Guard, under command of Major Alfred Wendt, and escorted up Fifth Avenue to the Squadron A armory, at Ninety-fourth Street and Madison Avenue. The men were acclaimed along the line of march and were reviewed at the Union League Club by Gov. Smith and other officials. The 15th Regiment Band, of the State Guard, accompanied the battalion.

More than 7,000 men were in the line of march when the 7th Regiment of the State Guard and the Veterans' Association of the regiment escorted the 107th Infantry up Fifth Avenue about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. One of the battalions of the 107th arrived in the city on Saturday to attend the ceremonies in Central Park when the decorations were bestowed by General O'Ryan, and the others came in from Camp Merritt yesterday.

Thousands See Veterans.

Thousands had gathered along Fifth Avenue to watch the veterans of the famous regiment pass up to their armory with new traditions of service. First in the parade were about 200 officers, who took their first training in the 7th Regiment and were commissioned in other units. They represented only part of the 1,048 officers in this war who took their first training in the old 7th New York Infantry.

General O'Ryan, who was himself a graduate of the 7th Infantry, was not able to take part in the parade, nor were any of the four Brigadier Generals and twenty-two Colonels able to be present. But the group of officers marching represented all branches of the service, with many from the navy, and the majority were casuals.

Behind the officers who still wear the uniform were members of the Veterans' Association who had served in the 7th Infantry at some time in the last forty years, and in the line were about seven men who had fought with the regiment during the civil war. They brought a great cheer from the throng as they marched along with their younger comrades.

The greatest ovation along the avenue was reserved for the newest veterans of the 7th, who are just returning from their hard fighting as part of the British armies in France and Belgium. At the head of the regiment marched Colonel Mortimer D. Bryant, formerly a Major in the old 1st New York Cavalry and in France commanding officer of the 106th Machine Gun Battalion. Behind him was Lieut. Col. Nicholas Engel, who on the Mexican border drilled Company E of the regiment so well that it surpassed all other companies in the division in shooting.

Many Wear Wound Stripes.

Many of the soldiers who marched with the 107th wore wound stripes and some wore two wound stripes. On many of these men the scars of their wounds were visible; others limped, and some of them had their arms in slings or casts. Others who reviewed the regiment at the Union League Club, besides Governor Smith, were Lieut. Col. Theodore Roosevelt, Charles E. Hughes, Colonel William Hayward, Colonel Merritt H. Smith, and Police Commissioner Enright.

Crowds Greet Old 22d.

The 102d Engineers were reviewed yesterday at their armory, at Fort Washington Avenue and 168th Street, by their former commander, Brig. Gen. Cornelius Vanderbilt, as they marched in to prepare for the parade today. Members of the Defendam Association, composed of veterans of the 22d Engineers of the old National Guard, marched with the 102d Engineers as a guard of honor, as did cadets from the Church of Our Lady of Lourdes.

Some disappointment was expressed by many persons in Washington Heights who had decorated their buildings along a proposed line of march of the regiment that the marching orders were changed at the last minute because the officers did not wish to compel their men to carry their heavy packs over such a long distance. The parade was to have started at 137th Street and Broadway, but, instead, orders were given that the march should begin at 157th Street. The troops then marched north to 181st Street, thence to St. Nicholas Avenue, and south to the armory.

More than 10,000 school children gathered along the line of march to honor the veterans, and several aid societies served refreshments to the men at the armory.

The 104th Field Artillery was met at the foot of East Fourteenth Street by the 1st Field Artillery of the State Guard and escorted to the 9th Coast Defense Command Armory in Fourteenth Street. The 102d Field Signal Battalion came from Camp Merritt by Government ferry to Forteenth Street and marched to the 71st Regiment Armory. Other auxiliary troops also were acclaimed as they marched through the streets to the 69th Regiment Armory.

BRONX WELCOMES ITS MEN.

105th Field Artillery Battalion Cheered in Homecoming Parade.

The Bronx turned out yesterday to welcome its battalion of the 105th Field Artillery, formerly the 2nd Field Artillery, veterans of the Argonne and St. Mihiel. The line of march was from Willis Avenue and 133rd Street to McKinley Square. It was crowded with cheering spectators and the windows and roofs of houses were filled with relatives and friends of the returning men.

The school children of the Borough were dismissed at 10:30 A. M., while many business places were closed. It was estimated that about 300,000 persons were in the crowds which cheered the battalion, which includes batteries D, E and F. After brief exercises at the reviewing stand in McKinley Square, the soldiers returned to their armory at Franklin Avenue and 166th Street, where they will be quartered until their return to Camp Mills.

Upon detraining at 133rd Street, the battalion was met by Grand Marshal Colonel Sylvanus G. Teets, of the Eighth Coast Defense Command, N. Y. G., and a detachment of the organization. A subcommittee of the Bronx Welcome and Memorial Committee, headed by Surrogate George M. S. Schulz, greeted the officers and men of the Bronx battalion.

The parade started at 11:30 and, an hour later, escorted by detachments of the Eighth Regiment and the newly formed 2nd Field Artillery, reached the reviewing stand. Mrs. L. Rourke, a daughter of a veteran of the civil war, showered the soldiers with roses, while the grand stand was crowded with officials of the county and relatives and friends of the returning soldiers. Conspicuous in the celebration were Grand Army veterans from Oliver Tilden, Vanderbilt and Alexander Hamilton Posts.

Addressing Major Robert W. Marshall, who was in command, Surrogate Schulz spoke of the splendid achievements of the American soldier and of the personal interest with which the people of the Bronx followed the boys of the 105th Artillery. He welcomed the officers and men in the name of the Bronx Welcome Committee and extended to the battalion the gratitude and appreciation of the citizens.

POWDER IN SHOES AS WELL AS GUNS

Foot=Ease to Be Added to Equipment of Hospital Corps at Fort Wayne.

Under the above heading the Detroit Free Press, among other things says: "The theory is that soldiers whose feet are in good condition can walk further and faster than soldiers who have corns and bunions incased in rawhide."

The Plattsburg Camp Manual advises men in training to shake Foot=Ease in their shoes each morning.

There is no foot comforter equal to Allen's Foot-Ease, the antiseptic, healing powder to be shaken into the shoes and sprinkled in the foot-bath, for hot, tired, aching, perspiring, smarting, swollen, tender feet, corns, bunions, blisters or callouses. What wouldn't you give to be relieved of one days pain of your corns and bunions? Here is relief for every day. You won't realize this until you have tried Allen's Foot=Ease yourself. You simply forget all about your feet they are made so comfortable. Ask your druggist to-day for a package of ALLEN'S FOOT=EASE.

Total War Dead of the 27th Division, 1980; Lost in Action, 1709

General O'Ryan Reveals Official Records of the Losses of His Own Division of New York Fighters

Major Gen. John F. O'Ryan yesterday released for publication the official list of the casualties of the 27th Division in the overseas service, with all the facts in the official records about the circumstances of each man's death and with complete information upon the burial place of each man, so far as available. The total number of officers and men who perished in the overseas service, in battle and from other causes, was 1,980, as shown by the official records now virtually complete.

Only twenty men and four officers in the official list of casualties were members of the 52d Artillery Brigade, which was not attached to the division in the overseas service but which fought as part of the 33d Division, composed of units of the Illinois National Guard, and the 79th Division, the National Army organization trained at Camp Meade. All the other battle casualties were suffered by the two infantry brigades of the division, with the auxiliary troops, and most of them in the last two months of the war, when the division stormed the Hindenburg line, forced the Cambrai-Bullecourt tunnels, and drove the Germans back steadily toward the Le Selle River.

The total number of battle casualties, exclusive of those in the artillery brigade, was 7,829. Among the 1,980 known dead are listed four officers and 267 men whose deaths were caused by disease, accident, or some other cause apart from the causes of actual battle. Deduction of this number leaves the number of those killed in action or died of wounds as 1,709.

By order of the division Commander, the data upon the place of death and burial of members of the old New York National Guard units also was given out. The name of the cemetery and the key to the exact burial place of the dead soldiers is given in the extreme right of the column. For instance, Rouen R-F-7887, means that the dead soldier has been buried at the St. Sever Cemetery at Rouen in Plot R, Row F, Grave Number 7887; and Bony 5-5-176 refers to the American Military Cemetery at Bony, Plot 5, Row 5, Grave 176. Where no cemetery is given, the official records, in the case of most of the soldiers, contains a reference to the secret military maps of the Allies, showing the burial place within a few feet. The official data upon the location of these cemeteries, with the map references omitted, follows:

Abbeville, Commune Cemetery, Abbeville, France.

*Includes one officer and two men who died of wounds in Germany, also included in died of wounds column.

Officers who compiled the table pointed out that they divided the battle figures into two divisions because the 27th took part in no great battle until it stormed the Hindenburg line in September. From July 9 until Aug. 23 it was organizing the East Poperinghe line and all its clashes with the enemy were considered only minor actions; and from Aug. 24 to 30 it carried on another minor action in the Dickebusch sector. This ended the minor actions of the division, except for the engagement at Vierstraat Ridge from Aug. 31 to Sept. 2. Another engagement at The Knoll followed on Sept. 26 to 28, and the division then was used in three planned attacks or battles, in which the Germans were driven back to the Le Selle—the battle of the Hindenburg line—on Sept. 29 and 30; the battle on the Le Selle River on Oct. 16 and 17, and the battle of Jonc De Mer Ridge on Oct. 18. An engagement at St. Maurice River ended the fighting on Oct. 19 and 20.

SAYS WEISGERBER'S FUEL DROVE MOTOR

CHEMICAL EXPERTS TESTIFY

Professor Adams Doubts Possibility of Combustible Containing 95 Per Cent. Water.

Capt. Edwin G. Weisgerber of the Chemical Warfare Division of the Army was placed on trial before a court-martial on Governors Island yesterday morning, charged with several specified offenses, one of them an alleged effort on his part to sell to the British Government a synthetic fuel which he, it is charged, claimed was a substitute for gasoline. The Government contends that the gasoline substitute contained picric acid and that its use would have eventually rendered useless any motor, and specifically names motors used in submarines, motor trucks, and other military and naval equipments. Another charge is that Captain Weisgerber threatened to withhold his invention from the American Navy and Army unless he and a fellow officer—Major O. B. Zimmerman of the Chemical Warfare Division—were promoted to the grade of colonel. A third charge is that he recommended the use of a pipe connection for oxygen and other containers that might have resulted in serious explosions and damages to life and property. A fourth charge alleges that he made disparaging remarks about Capt. H. D. Truman, an American officer, who during the first two years of the war fought with the British Army.

Major Bass called as the first witness Arthur H. Wyckeham-George, Assistant Director of War Supplies for the British Military Mission, whose headquarters are in Baltimore. Mr. Wyckeham-George said that his first connection with the matter was when he received a memorandum from the British Embassy telling him of the Weisgerber synthetic fuel invention, and directing him to look into the matter. When the memorandum arrived, the witness said that he was absent from Baltimore and that instead of the memorandum being turned over to the United States Army Chemical Warfare Division for investigation, as would have been the case had he been present, it was sent to a Pittsburgh laboratory for analysis.

After he received a report Mr. Wyckeham-George said that he had a conference with Captain Weisgerber. At that conference were, he said, Major Victor Lenner of the United States Army, Lieut. Col. Auld of the British Army, J. H. Burnett of the Tri-State News Bureau of Pittsburgh, and himself, and then the witness said he learned that the accused was a Doctor of Science of Heidelberg University, Germany. Judge Sims asked if Captain Weisgerber had brought up the matter of remuneration, and Mr. Wyckeham-George replied that that phase was not discussed.

Following some argument Colonel Patter ruled that the report which the Pittsburgh laboratory had submitted to Mr. Wyckeham-George was admissible into the court record. This report, which was signed by A. McKenna, Inspector for the British War Mission, was to the effect that Captain Weisgerber, accompanied by Mr. Burnett, had called on him, and that he had gone with them to the laboratory of the Equitable Motor Company, where Captain Weisgerber had headquarters. At the laboratory Weisgerber, McKenna reported, took a new five-gallon can and filled it with water from a faucet and then took the can into a small dark room, which did not contain receptacles which would make possible a fluid substitution. Captain Weisgerber, he said, was in the small room less than two minutes.

Weisgerber, he said, told him he had added two secret chemicals, which would act on the water in such a way as to blend the other eight ingredients, which he said were added in the presence of McKenna. In this process McKenna said he had recognized the odor of carbon-disulphide, ether, camphor and picric acid. Captain Weisgerber, he said, then took a little of the fluid, placed it on a saucer and ignited it. He said it burned with a yellow smokeless flame and left no residue. Subsequently the fluid, McKenna reported, was put into an automobile and the machine operated smoothly and climbed hills with apparent ease.

At the afternoon session experts of the Chemical Warfare Service, and all of whom were professors of organic chemistry in large universities, were called.

Professor Adams of the University of Illinois said that while on duty in Washington he received a sample which purported to be the Weisgerber synthetic fuel. He made an analysis and said that he found that the fuel contained one-tenth of 1 per cent. of picric acid. The rest of it, he added, was gasoline. When asked by Major Humes if it was not possible that other chemicals might have been present, Professor Adams said such may have been the case, but, if so, he found no trace of them. Major Humes then handed him a bottle containing a white fluid and asked him to make a superficial examination of it. Professor Adams did so and said that it smelled like gasoline. Professor Adams said that he did not think it was possible to make a fuel that contains 95 per cent. of water, which the Weisgerber synthetic fuel is said to contain.

TELLS OF AUTOMATIC PLANE

Flew 100 Miles Without a Pilot, Secretary Baker Reveals.

FORT WORTH, Tex., March 24.—Under automatic control, an airplane capable of carrying a heavy load and operated without a human guide has made a trip of 100 miles and landed close to the point it set out to reach, Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War, disclosed in an address here today. Secretary Baker, with General Peyton C. March, Chief of Staff, came here to inspect Camp Bowie.

The device which made such a flight possible, and which has been kept secret, Mr. Baker said, is an automatic guide for airplanes, and was invented in America. It is designed as an instrument of war and the Secretary referred to it in describing to his audience the possible horrors of future wars if there is to be no League of Nations.

Secretary Baker did not explain the exact nature of the invention, but he made it clear that the War Department considered it one of the most wonderful pieces of mechanism for war's destructive purposes.

FIGHTING MEN VOTE TO KEEP COUNCIL

Soldiers, Sailors, and Marines Ignore Request Made by Gen. Wood.

URGED BY LABOR LEADERS

Unions May Be Asked to Contribute to Fund of $18,000 to Finance the Organization.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., March 24.—The request of Major General Leonard Wood to disband their organization was ignored by the officials of the Soldiers', Sailors', and Marines' Council at a meeting tonight. The association of returned jobless fighters proceeded to complete their organization.

A Finance Committee of seven was appointed to ask the assistance of the American Federation of Labor and arrange plans for the collection of $18,000 to make up the organization's budget. It was not stated how the fund would be raised, but President Roy Williams suggested that a canvass of the city be made. It is expected that the labor unions will contribute.

M. L. Johnson of the Chicago Federation of Labor addressed the meeting.

"I understand that various officials of the Government have requested you to demobilize," he said. "In my opinion the thing to do is to go ahead with your plans, get an office where your officials can be found, and then allow any objectors to come to that office with their conferences and advice. Show them you are independent."

Barrett O'Hara, ex-Lieutenant Governor of Illinois, also addressed the meeting.

"I understand that a very honorable man high in the Government service has asked you to deorganize," he said. "I am here tonight to give my answer to this question. My presence proclaims me with your plans and your projects. I am for you because you are portraying pure Americanism. You have a proper cause; there is no anarchy. But if you wish to prevent a revolution in America you must organize all of the jobless soldiers and then find means to secure them employment."

Thirty-five new members were enrolled.

Morton L. Johnson, Executive Secretary of the Labor Party, said that organization stood squarely behind the Soldiers', Sailors', and Marines' Council.

TAKE OVER BIGGEST WARSHIP

Idaho Goes Into Commission and Will Come Here for Equipment.

PHILADELPHIA, March 24.—The superdreadnought Idaho, the largest fighting ship afloat, went into commission as part of the United States Navy at Camden, N. J., today. Captain L. A. Kaiser, representing Admiral C. F. Hughes, commandant of the Fourth Naval district, handed the receipt for the great ship to H. A. Magoun, Vice President of the corporation that built the vessel. The Idaho's crew of 1,407 stood at attention during the transfer of the fighter to the Navy.

The American flag, the Union Jack and the commission pennant were raised on the Idaho. Captain Carl T. Vogelgesang read the orders from Secretary of the Navy Daniels appointing him to the command of the superdreadnought. It will probably be a week before the ship proceeds to the Philadelphia Navy Yard and thence to New York for additional machinery and equipment before starting on her maiden trip.

BELMONT, JR., OPERATED ON

Young Banker in Serious Condition in General Memorial Hospital.

August Belmont, Jr., member of the banking firm of August Belmont & Co., underwent an operation for serious intestinal trouble at the General Memorial Hospital, 105th Street and Central Park West, late yesterday afternoon. He rallied from the operation, and was reported late last night as resting comfortably as could be expected, though his condition is regarded as serious. The operation was performed by Dr. William B. Coley of 6 West Fiftieth Street.

He was accompanied to the hospital by his father, Major August Belmont, and his wife, Mrs. Alice W. de Goicouria Belmont, the latter remaining at the hospital all night.

Mr. Belmont, who is 36 years old, is widely known in social and banking circles. Following his graduation from Harvard in 1904 he began his business career as a clerk in the banking firm of his father, and in 1910 was admitted as a member of the firm. He is an officer in a number of other banking institutions and other enterprises.

two individuals are reported to have entered for this prize, but the general belief here is that none of these will be able to make the start in advance of the naval planes.

Three of the four seaplanes with which the Navy Department plans to attempt its transatlantic flight are now at the naval air station at Rockaway Beach. They are known as the N-C 1 type of machine. Minor changes are now being made in all the machines at Rockaway Beach, but it is expected that trial flights will be made within a week or ten days, and that the actual transatlantic flight will be started soon after May 1. At least two of the three machines at Rockaway Beach have already been flown.

Lieut. Commander John H. Towers is in charge of the preparations at Rockaway Beach. Each of the three seaplanes there is equipped with three Liberty motors, having 1,000 to 1,200 combined horsepower. Experiments are now being made in the arrangement of the motors, but it is believed that the final choice will provide for two tractor or "pulling" propellers, and one "pushing" propeller. There will be four Liberty motors in the fourth plane, now under construction, and these will be arranged in the so-called "tandem style"—that is, two tractor and two "pusher" motors.

The speed of the first three seaplanes has been estimated by the builders at 100 miles an hour, and it is said that at least one of the planes has made approximately that speed in trial flights.

The original gasoline consumption provided for a sustained flight of sixteen hours, but changes in the design of the hull interior have allowed for increased storage space substantially increasing the gasoline capacity.

Other changes in the original design contemplate lowering the pilots' station nearer the pontoon so as to facilitate and render less dangerous the changing of pilots in flight. The machines have a wind spread of approximately 126 feet 6 inches, and the wings are 12 feet wide.

It is believed that each plane will carry a minimum crew of six men, two of whom will be pilots and the others mechanics and observers. Quarters for the crew, when not engaged in the actual operation of the machine or its repair in flight, have been provided in the hull.

It is expected that the flight will be made at a high altitude, to take advantage of the westerly winds, and the crew will be equipped with heating and respiratory apparatus to allow them to withstand the cold and rarefied atmosphere.

City in No Danger of Tieup.

Mr. Roosevelt's letter to Dr. Garfield disclosed the fact that navy authorities now feel that the Fuel Administration can relieve the situation through co-operation with the United States Railroad Administration officials. Mr. Roosevelt asserts that the navy has made good its promise to see that in some way or other New York would be provided with coal necessary for transit facilities and light, and in his letter he seeks to correct the impression that the Interborough Railway was in danger of a shutdown through failure of the navy to keep it supplied with coal.

"One thing that has impressed me," says the concluding paragraph of Secretary Roosevelt's letter, "is that the public utility people of New York have been running first to one Government agency and then to another. I cannot help feeling that if it can be made clear that the Fuel and Railroad Administrations are the proper agencies to handle the situation, the position of the Federal Government will become more sound."

Mr. Roosevelt's letter follows:

My Dear Mr. Garfield:

You will remember forwarding me, some time ago, a letter from the Public Service Commission of the First New York District calling attention to the danger of a failure of coal supply to the public service corporations of the City of New York, owing to the interruption of the regular service, due to the present labor difficulties between the tugboat owners and their employes. At that time the navy promised, in view of the sudden and unexpected emergency, that it would in some way or other see that New York was provided with transit facilities and light, without regard to what the strict interpretation of the regulations or laws might be, until such time as a more proper method of handling the situation could be devised.

The navy, as you know, has made good on that promise, and I would like to take this occasion to correct an impressoin which seems to be prevalent in the New York press that the Interborough Railway was in danger of a shutdown through what the newspapers describe as a failure of the navy to keep it supplied with coal. It was due to the navy's activities that arrangements were made with the Railroad Administration in the first place, and on the particular night in question the navy officers remained at their posts until late at night, ready to move other coal with their own tugs immediately to the plant of the Interborough Company should the delayed tugs of the Railroad Administration fail to arrive in time.

Made Careful Survey.

As it is not a customary or proper function of the Navy Department to act as a supplier of coal to public utility corporations as a regular thing, and in accordance with the understanding reached at the time of your letter that the navy's interposition was to be a mere temporary bridge over a perilous situation, I have had a careful survey of the situation made by Captain Hutchinson, who is charged with the duty of directing the movements of the army and navy tugs in the Port of New York. He, in company with a direct representative of the Secretary's office, your personal representative, and Colonel Herrick, who is charged with duties corresponding in the army to those of Captain Hutchinson, made a personal investigation of all the public service plants, followed by an extended conference with A. H. Smith, the Regional Director for the Railroad Administration. As a result of this it seems now proper for the navy to give up any further responsibility in the supplying of this coal.

There was, according to the reports of the superintendents of the various stations, sufficient coal at all public service power plants to last them safely through the first of this week. There was, also, every indication that the great majority, if not all, of these plants would be able to provide themselves with enough coal from day to day to continue to operate, although it is admitted by a very narrow margin, and it is also recognized that a suspension for forty-eight hours of all coal deliveries would result in a perilous situation.

However, with sufficient breathing space ahead to complete arrangements for emergencies, it is our feeling that, upon proper representation from the proper authorities in the City of New York to the Fuel Administration, you can relieve the situation by co-operation with the railroad officials. Under such conditions it is obviously no longer necessary for the navy to attempt a responsibility which, perhaps, it should never have assumed in connection with supplying coal to public service corporations in the City of New York. We will appreciate it if you will see that the Public Service Commission of the First District, as well as the power plant managers, thoroughly understand that for the future they are to make known their wants in any sudden emergency to you instead of to the Navy Department.

One thing that has impressed me is that the public utility people in New York have been running first to one Government agency and then to another. I cannot help feeling that if it can be made clear that the Fuel and Railroad Administrations are the proper agencies to handle the situation the position of the Federal Government will become more sound.

Very sincerely yours,
(Signed)
FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

The coal supply of the Interborough and other transit and light companies has been assured for several days to come by the increase in the number of private coalboats in operation, it was said yesterday by representatives of the boat owners. Thomas L. Delahunty, President of the Marine Workers' Affiliation, said last night that the claims of the private boat owners to have a considerable percentage of their boats in operation were exaggerated.

President Delahunty gave out yesterday a letter in reply to a suggestion by Paul Bonynge, counsel for the boat-owners, that the two men could settle the entire question by a talk at luncheon over the brandy and coffee. Mr. Delahunty declined the suggestion for a conference, but he left the way open for further negotiations in the following concluding paragraph of his letter:

"I believe there is considerable merit in a permanent board as you suggest and will be beneficial, if entered into in good faith, by both sides, but I am free to confess that at the present time, there is a lack of confidence from this side of the controversy."

The Machine for Big Jobs of Figuring

Efficiency is the shortest route between thought and action. Dalton operation, a method distinctly confined to this machine, is an easier, more accurate method of handling figures fast.

We call it Touch Method. You should have a demonstration of it. A Dalton operator can handle 25% to 40% more adding and listing in one day than any other machine with less fatigue.

This is a strong statement. It is the result of elimination on the part of the operator, of thousands of head movements back and forth from figures to machine. If you can transfer to fingers the figures your eye sees as fast as you see them without head movement to machine, will you not save time, handle figures easier and faster?

Have a Demonstration

The Auditor of the Michigan Mutual Life Insurance Co., Detroit, says: "Where the Dalton Touch System is mastered, errors are practically eliminated. I do not remember of a mistake having been made within the past two years."

We will gladly bring a Dalton to your office for demonstration on your work.

A Breakfast Suggestion

Fried Sausage With Gravy. Lay slices of Jones Dairy Farm Sausage meat on a very hot iron frying-pan, and turn them as soon as they are well browned. As soon as the second side is browned they should be set into a hot oven to finish cooking.

Remove from the pan the instant they are done, and keep hot while making gravy. Add dry flour to the fat in the pan and let it brown as much as you dare to—then brown it a little more.

Remove from the fire while adding boiling water (one-half pint for each tablespoon of flour); stir till it is smooth and all the glaze in the bottom of the pan is dissolved, then return to the fire to boil for two minutes.

A Luncheon Dainty

Pork Loaf. 2 lbs. Jones Dairy Farm Sausage, 1 lb. steak chopped, 4 slices bread (soaked in milk), ½ onion (chopped), 2 eggs, salt, pepper and mace, grated rind lemon, 1 tablespoon lemon juice. Mix ingredients thoroughly. Grease a pan with butter or lard, place loaf in it, dust over with bread crumbs and bake in medium oven. Baste with melted lard several times. When done, serve hot.

For the Home Dinner

JONES DAIRY FARM SAUSAGE

Made in both meat and link styles and serves as the basis for a number of easily prepared and appetizing dishes.

It contains no cereal or preservative—just choice young pork, delicately spiced, made after the same old-time farm recipe we have been following for over thirty years. Only enough is made at a time to fill each day's shipments, bringing it to your table in perfect condition.

HOME!

The boys are home!

Up Fifth Avenue they march, with flags a-flying and bands a-playing; just as they would have marched through Berlin if the Kaiser hadn't quit---these boy veterans who marched to Victory.

A year and more ago they marched away and left their homes and happiness and friends behind to go to France to fight for us. They fought---they won---and now they're home again.

They've done their part, those boys of ours---they saw it through.

And we who crowd the curb and wave our hats and cheer to let them know we're glad---how about us?

We bought Liberty Bonds to put up the money to buy the guns those fellows fought with. They're proud of us.

They know we backed them to our limit while they were "over there."

But our work isn't over.

We can't let the job those boys have done in France go unfinished.

We've got to see it through.

We've got to raise the money to make sure of the Victory they've won and bring the rest of our soldiers back.

The Victory Liberty Loan is coming—Let's see it through!

Finish the Job

This space is made available to the Government for the advertising of the Victory Loan by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company

on behalf of the holders of its twenty millions of policies in force, amounting to over four and a half billions of dollars of insurance, for whose protection this company is holding over seven hundred and twenty million dollars reserve, besides other assets. Its employes sold over $133,000,000 of Liberty Bonds and W. S. S. last year, and are still in the campaign. The company holds $80,000,000 of Liberty Bonds and intends to subscribe for millions of the forthcoming loan, which it recommends as without qualifications the safest investment in the world.

FIVE SHIPS HERE WITH 14,000 TROOPS

MET BY PHILADELPHIANS

Manchuria Had 1,100 Sick and Wounded—990 Taken to Debarkation Hospital.

Nearly fourteen thousand troops arrived yesterday from France on two battleships and three transports, among whom was the 103d Trench Mortar Battery, the first unit of the gallant 28th Keystone Division of Pennsylvania to return from the war. The soldiers, including hundreds of sick and wounded, who had managed to get on deck to see New York Harbor, were all cheered by the sunny weather.

The battleship Montana docked at Pier 3, Hoboken, at 1:30 P. M. yesterday, with 1,477 officers and men. The battleship escorted the George Washington to Brest with President Wilson on board when she left New York on March 5, and, after being forty hours in the French port to coal, made the return trip in eight days, which is the best speed that warships of her class have done.

The troops on board were composed principally of the 112th Engineers of the 37th Division, who have been engaged in road construction work in the Argonne and at other fronts. Major Roger B. Hull, a lawyer of 40 Wall Street, who has been a Judge Advocate of several courts-martial in Paris, was on board.

The North Carolina, which brought 1,471 officers and men, was met down the bay by several big power boats loaded with enthusiastic Philadelphians who had come over to greet the 103d Trench Mortar Battery of the 28th Division, which is Pennsylvania's own fighting units. The battery, which was commanded by Captain Ralph M. Knowles of Philadelphia, saw service at Fismes, Argonne, and Verdun and was with the British in Belgium. During the Argonne drive one whole platoon was wiped out by the enemy's shellfire, the officers said. The main body of the 28th Division is scheduled to return to America in May.

When the transport Matsonia docked yesterday morning at Hoboken with 3,328 troops on board Major Gen. David M. Shanks, Commander of the Port of Embarkation, had arranged for the officers and men to have a hot meal served to them on Pier 3 after they had been checked off by the personnel officers. This is a new plan and more than 6,000 were fed in this manner at Hoboken yesterday.

Colonel Robert Noble of 170 West Fifty-eighth Street was in command of the troops on the Matsonia, which included the 160th Infantry, Medal Detachment, Machine Gun Company, Field and Staff and Headquarters Company, and Supply Company, with fifty-three officers and 1,518 men. There were also detachments of the 159th Infantry, with twelve officers and 853 men, and detachments of engineers and casual companies.

The only soldier on the Matsonia with the D. S. O. was Sergeant Jack Dillon of Boston, of Company C, 102d Infantry, 26th Division, who served as a gunner in the front-line trenches at Chateau-Thierry and was wounded five different times.

Antigone Brings Convalescents.

The transport Antigone brought 2,814 officers and men who were convalescents from the American base hospital on the French coast, with the exception of two casual companies of three officers and 158 men. They were in command of Colonel W. W. Wright.

Among the 4,492 troops on the transport Manchuria, which arrived late yesterday at Hoboken, was the 312th Signal Battalion of the 87th Division, made up of men from New York, New Jersey, and the Middle West. She had 1,100 sick and wounded on board, with 43 cases of influenza and one death, Private E. F. Turnourn of Crawford, Neb., attached to the 303d Aero Squadron.

The transport also brought home the 336th Aero Supply Company, 3 officers and 140 men; 93d Aero Pursuit Squadron, 3 officers and 152 men; 148th, 142d, 89th, 36th, 182d, and 341st Aero Squadrons, with a total of 37 officers and 1,338 men; the 304th Trench Mortar Battery of the 79th Division, 3 officers and 161 men; detachments of base hospital units, casual companies, a detachment of the 307th Repair and Salvage Corps attached to the 302d Tank Corps, 3 officers and 112 men; seven casual companies, of which two were New York and one New Jersey, and the 195th Casual Company, composed of men from the State of Washington.

Of the wounded men on the Manchuria 990 were taken off and put aboard the hospital ship Shinnecock, which landed them at Pier 90, foot of West Fiftieth Street, North River, last night. They were placed in ambulances and taken to the Debarkation Hospital at Grand Central Palace.

COMPLAIN OF TROOPS' ACTS.

Charges of Malicious Mischief in France Delay a Demobilization.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—Delay in the demobilization at Camp Eustis, Va., of some units of the 64th Coast Artillery Regiment, recently returned from France, has been due, it was learned today at the War Department, to investigation of complaints made by the owners of buildings in which these companies were quartered while in France.

Following the departure of the regiment for the United States, it was reported that serious cases of malicious mischief had been discovered, at these quarters, and also that valuable oil paintings were missing. General Pershing asked that the companies involved be held in service until an investigation could be made. Subsequently the demobilization of the entire regiment was ordered, but it is understood that responsible officers are to be held in the service until the entire matter is cleared up.

CLOTHING DRIVE TO GO ON.

Red Cross Expects 10,000 Tons by Next Monday.

At each of the seventy collection stations established by the American Red Cross bundles of clothing for the destitute of the allied countries were being received throughout the day yesterday, and the New York County Chapter announced last night that the clothing drive would continue until next Monday. The Red Cross expects to receive 10,000 tons of cast-off clothing during the drive.

Mrs. Edward M. Hagar, in charge of the work, said last night that the results of the first day of the drive were entirely satisfactory. The Red Cross was particularly pleased with the prompt response from men in the clothing business, who sent in many large bundles of new clothing, she said. Probably the busiest of the collection centres was at 197 East Broadway, where scores of bundles were taken in. The upper west side also showed excellent returns for the day, Mrs. Hagar said.

What a part the cigarette played!

In those grim, tense moments, waiting for the word to "go"; in that blessed lull, hours afterward, just before the relief party came; in those other, sterner moments when his spirit fought to smile, what was the thing he wanted most?

The cigarette!

And now, with the big job done, what so much as the cigarette will help "keep him smiling" until he's home again?

The war has taken Maeterlinck into a field hitherto strange to him. It is said that "A Burgomaster of Belgium" is founded on an incident officially attested and recorded in the Belgian White Book. So the author of "Pelleas and Melisande" and "The Blue Bird" has given hostages to reality. The theme is indeed intensely dramatic—as dramatic, for example, as the romantic and legendary story of "Mona Vanna," the play of M. Maeterlinck's which, in fact, it most nearly resembles. And there is one other point of similarity. When the dramatic situation becomes most intense, the present play, like "Mona Vanna," pauses in its onward drive while the characters search out the spiritual implications of their human predicament. On the basis of realism is erected a structure of soul-searching philosophy.

The story is quite simple, and it is (intentionally, as it seems,) made less lurid and harrowing than many well-known incidents of the German invasion. One of the officers of the force occupying Stilemonde has been shot and, as the franc tireur cannot be found, the Burgomaster is condemned to die as a warning to neighboring towns. He is a worthy man, much loved; and others offer to die in his place. But he refuses, thinking it better to suffer without stain than to live by means of a sacrificial lie.

Toward the close a new theme is introduced when it appears that the Burgomaster's son-in-law, a German Lieutenant, has been ordered to lead the firing squad. Staunchly Prussian in everything else, he balks at this barbarity, and elects to die, as does also his young wife, the Burgomaster's daughter. Again the action pauses while the situation is searched for its deeper values, and again the wisdom of the Burgomaster triumphs. The sacrifice is shown to be useless, quixotic, and the lives of the young people are spared. In the end it appears that the Colonel has been content to test the Lieutenant's obedience, and has himself given the fatal command.

It need scarcely be said that so far as the play is incident and drama it gripped and thrilled the audience. Scrupulously reticent and unsensational, and especially in depicting the Prussian boorishness and cruelty, its sheer restraint proved more powerful than many a lurid melodrama written from the point of view of Broadway. Once again the war became a living horror, thrilling and enraging even those who have become most exalted in the atmosphere of pacification.

It is more timely today, perhaps, than it ever could have been in wartime. But it must be confessed that its realism is imperfect. This is partly due to the fact that it has been altered and embroidered by a presumably English hand, and is played by obviously English actors. But certain incongruities are inherent in the original. There are times when the proffered sacrifices seem somewhat superhuman and father obviously arranged for effect. One was reminded of the inhumanly prevalent magnanimity of "Aglavaine and Selysette." If it was M. Maeterlinck's intention to master the manner of realism his success is at best partial.

Though the dramatic attitudes are sometimes forced, however, the philosophy is sound as it is beautiful. Few characters in the modern drama are more richly and deeply human than this Burgomaster. A man of peace, passing his life happily among his fellow-townsmen, his orchids and his vineyards, the war comes upon him as something monstrous and incredible. Even after he is doomed to die his thoughts persist at times in returning to his prunings, his graftings, and his sprays. But in the end the crisis grips him wholly, and he plumbs the fate that has overwhelmed him to its depths. His death is an emotional exaltation, a sublime martyrdom.

Lyall Swete's performance in the title part is thoroughly adequate and, except for an unpleasant vocal mannerism, is much more than that. Manly, even burly, in physique and deeply human in every attitude and gesture, he illumines the soul of the man with an infinite subtlety and variety of verbal emphasis and facial play. The scene of his parting with his children is richly, powerfully emotional.

Irby Marshall as the Burgomaster's daughter and Leonard Willey as his German son-in-law appear creditably in parts that afford no great opportunities. As the old gardener, Claus, Malcom Moffat gives a very delicately human and thoroughly appealing characterization.

LOTS OF FUN IN 'TUMBLE IN.'

Sprightly Musical Farce Based on "Seven Days" at the Selwyn.

TUMBLE IN, a musical comedy in three acts and four scenes. Based on "Seven Days," by Mary Roberts Rinehart and Avery Hopwood; book and lyrics by Otto Harbach; music by Rudolph Friml. At the Selwyn.

The Burglar	Johnny Ford
Jim Wilson	Herbert Corthell
Dallas Brown	Charles Ruggles
Kitty McNair	Edna Hibbard
Anne Wilson	Peggy O'Neil
Tom Harbison	Roland Hogue
Bella Knowles	Virginia Hammond
Aunt Selina	Zelda Sears
Flannigan	Fred Lennox
Nicholas	Ivan Stogoff
Olga	Olga Michka
Elsie	Elsie Lawson
Claire	Claire Nagle

Spiritualism, lingerie, a divorcee, prohibition, (on the horizon,) a burglar, quarantine, and Peggy O'Neil are some of the seasoning in "Tumble In," which opened at the Selwyn Theatre last night. There are also Charles Ruggles, Edna Hibbard, Herbert Corthell, Zelda Sears, and mnay others, including Olga Mishka and Ivan Strogoff. And ambiguous line with but a single thought, as well as situations comic and critical. There are, too, songs that sing themselves, but don't have to because of the singers, and dances. Not-to-mention costumes, and some to mention. The whole is a musical farce based, more or less securely, on the "Seven Days" of Mary Roberts Rinehart and Avery Hopwood.

Not all of the original has been abandoned in mixing it with music. The free-and-easy story sticks on to the finish, rather spiced by the music than demobilized. It's all about a company of people, guests invited and uninvited, persons desirable and undesirable, who are quarantined in a house too small for them because the health authorities think that a Japanese butler has the small-pox. In addition to those corporeally present there are the spirits conjured by Anne, who rap and tap and move tables that talk and tell the awkward truth. Throughout the play Anne is usually under the influence of spirits, either the kind scheduled to go to their graves on July 1 or those that leave their limbo land to disturb the furniture. Anne is Miss O'Neil, and whether she has the spirits in or around her, she is much of the life of the show. But not all of it. There are the others.

Some of the songs seemed to get "control" of the audience. "The Laugh," by Misses Hibbard and O'Neil and Messrs. Ruggles and Corthell, was one of the emphatic hits. Also "Won't You Help Me Out?", with Claire Nagle leading the entire cast, held up the progress of the play while the audience was trying to get enough of it. It was helped by a novel setting, in which every one was hanging over the edge of a roof.

The burglar was Johnny Ford. He didn't sing and he didn't say much. But his pantomime, seen and unseen, was part of the essential business—and good.

The house, acting as censor, passed the whole performance with enthusiasm—including the shimmy.

"LUCK IN PAWN" IS MILD.

Walter	Robert Allen
Mrs. Griffith Vance	Brenda Fowler
Mrs. R. Standish Norton	Ann Warrington
R. Standish Norton	Roland Young
Beth Vance	Reina Carruthers
Dr. Cole Bently	Robert Adams
Donald Ranier	Edward H. Robins
Nathan Armsberg	Robert Fischer
Annabel Lee	Miss Taliaferro
Mrs. John Logan	Florence Short
Griffith Vance	Charles Brown
John Logan	Harry Ashford
Hotel Clerk	L. Melton Clodagh
Porter	Walter Ainsley
Baggageman	Benjamin Kauser

It is a fairly diverting but rather straggling comedy which the Forty-eighth Street Theatre offers under the title of "Luck in Pawn." Its chief assets are Roland Young and a thin vein of whimsical humor; but it is something of a question whether these can compensate for the play's general unconvincing character and the obvious lack of the hand of an experienced builder. The playwright, Marvin Taylor, has been none too adroit in his fashioning, and the play is effective only momentarily.

Its central character, a young girl of thwarted artistic ambitions, invades a social colony in Southern California, and a jaded youth with thirty millions persuades her to stay. To satisfy the conventions he invents for her an unimpeachable family, and when she finds herself quartered at an expensive hotel, with no particular prospect of paying, she arranges with a pawnbroker to finance her with no other security than her prospects of marriage with the jaded millionaire. (Thus "Luck in Pawn.")

The machinations of a jealous mother, who covets the millionaire as son-in-law, bring this situation to a rather leisurely climax in the final act, and the pretender and her backer are momentarily vanquished. There follows an atmospheric prologue—really the best bit in the play—at a remote railway station at 5 o'clock in the morning, and here the lovers are reunited.

The story is spun with no little sympathy and humor, but the characterization is vague throughout, and the necessity for vigorous rewriting is generally apparent. Roland Young gave the best performance of the evening as the bored rich youth, and Mabel Taliaferro, lured from the films, was a sweet and appealing figure as the social pretender, and caught well the play's whimsical quality. Robert Fischer did his artistic best to give definite characterization to the money lender, and Edward H. Robins, the producer, appeared in a single scene as a substitute for a suddenly ailing actor.

YALE IN DUNSANY THRILLER

University's Players Act "The Murderers" and Other Playlets.

Yale University's company of players came to town last night, and opened a week's performance of four one-act plays at the Punch and Judy Theatre. The proceeds are to be devoted to a fund for a college playhouse at New Haven.

Of the repertory, by far the best both in point of acting and dramatic interest, was the Lord Dunsany play, "The Murderers," a tragedy in a gruesome vein, but with a thrilling end that made several of the fair friends of the Yale actors start in their seats in horror. It is the first time this play of the popular Irish dramatist has been given in New York. There are three actors, the scene being in the room of a London public house, dimly lighted and scantily furnished. Bill and Tom, working men, impersonated by W. Rice Brewster and Louis M. Loeb, respectively, sit at a table discussing the recent murder of Tom's brother in that room a few days before. The murderer is not known, but Bill's involuntary shiver when Tom, in his east cockney style, says that the thumb mark found on the hammer that did the deed will give the hangman the right to use his ten fingers in hanging the murderer shows the audience how the clue will develop.

A stranger quietly enters, makes pals of Tom and Bill, buys beer from the window in the wall. Bill is suspicious, and when urged to have another glass hands back his mug, but first wipes it off clean on his sleeve. The stranger, acted by Alan B. Campbell, is the detective. The act works toward its tragical end by the stranger telling Bill he will bet his life against his that he can pick the murderer of Tom's brother. Bill is cornered. Tom is horrified at the sequel, but regard for his old pal is too strong for him to help the detective to arrest him and both men suddenly leap on the detective, force him to the floor, and slowly strangle him as he quivers and struggles to free himself. The three Yale men in the play rise considerably above the usual amateur standard and give an excellent picture of a so-called low dive in London.

Alan B. Campbell, one of the three stars, is President of the Yale University Dramatic Association, and he made his part of the smooth, obsequious waiter in the comedy of "Nettie," by George Ade, the chief character of interest. The skit resolves itself around the ludicrous situation of three men coming to the same restaurant to dine with the same girl, each of whom discovers that he had met her under the same circumstances and given her identically the same presents. The clever harpy does not appear.

A burlesque of Greek days, "The Aulis Difficulty," by Maurice Baring, bringing in Agamemnon, William Harris; Iphigenia, Andrew J. Fox, Jr.; Odysseus, George T. Achelis, in love with Iphigenia, and other classic heroes, is an amusing bit of nonsense on the effort to make Iphigenia see the wisdom of making a sacrifice of herself to appease the Goddess Artemis. Mr. Fox plays the Grecian damsel with nonchalant carelessness and studied awkwardness, while the bare legs of the men and the gown low cut in the back of Iphigenia provide the proper burlesque character. The final piece, "Bunk," by Henry Clapp Smith, called a mellow-drama, is thoroughly described by the name.

The performance will continue through the week.

"Le Mariage de Figaro" Revived.

"Le mariage de Figaro," played by the French company here earlier in the season, was revived last night at the Vieux Colombier for a two weeks' engagement. It will bring the present session of the French players to an end.

Columbia to Give "Take a Chance."

"Take a Chance," the play to be presented this year by the undergraduates of Columbia University, will be given in the Grand Ballroom of the Hotel Plaza on the evenings of April 28, 29, 30; May 1 and 3.

MUSIC

By James Gibbons Huneker

Encephalitis Lethargica.

Every law should have its holiday. Fancy going to a piano or vocal recital on such a gorgeous Spring afternoon as yesterday's! Fancy having to hear a girl pipe, a youth peck at the keyboard, or a powerful man scrape with the hair of the horse the whimpering catgut! And the overtones of victory fairly humming in the air; and "little old Bagdad on the subway," as O. Henry affectionately rechristened our dirty, noisy, wonderful New York, ablaze with uniforms and pretty girls—and in the face of these marvels to march into Aeolian Hall and listen to queer, ugly sounds called sonatas! It was too much. Central Park tempted, bock-beer signs beckoned, and that most fatal malady, "Encephalitis Lethargica," attacked. Sleeping sickness and music criticism, however, are old pals. We fled Forty-third Street, but were arrested by the vision of a leopard skin and a pair of musical eyes, and then, true to form, we meekly returned to Aeolian, but not to sleep. Greta Torpadie doesn't make one drowsy when she sings, and she sang delightfully at this recital.

The only wonder is that as she sings so well she doesn't sing better. (Pardon the Hibernicism.) She is musical to the tip of her thorax—if indeed thoraxes have an appendix—her style and diction are admirable, her powers of expression varied. A pity that she is not sure of her technique, for it is purely a question of technique. Her voice is naturally agile, of sympathetic timbre, but she abuses it. She skirted some dangerous vocal abysses; her scale was like Joseph's coat, of many colors, though her middle register is colorless; furthermore, the upper tones were squeezed, and while she achieved some delicate pianissimos, there was often a sense of insecurity. In a word, Miss Torpadie's voice is not placed as it should be. But her musical temperament comes to the rescue. The Scandinavian group was delivered with deep feeling, with archness, humor, and dramatic sweep. The French compositions were less satisfactory. Harry Burleigh, who, if you are in search of a representative American composer, will serve better than some more celebrated names, was on the program, his engaging "Didn't It Rain?" made known by Mabel Garrison. It was encored, as was "Fantoches," by Debussy. Greta Torpadie has a charming personality. She was heartily applauded. Samuel Lifschey, formerly first viola player in the New York Symphony Orchestra, played his instrument in various compositions. He is skillful, musical, but lacks dynamic urge. He is too amiable. Walter Golde proved a capital accompanist.

PLAN AMERICAN ORCHESTRA

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., March 24.—An American symphony orchestra playing American music and featuring famous American soloists is in process of formation here with the support of a group of Chicagoans headed by Mrs. J. Ogden Armour. The new organization will be called the Philharmonic Orchestra of Chicago.

Mrs. Armour and her co-workers, it is announced, will endeavor to give the city at popular prices the best music of native composers. Singers and pianists, it is said, will be garnered from the corners of the musical globe, provided they are American and perform for Chicagoans selections that were made in America.

It was learned that Earl R. Benedict, the manager of the proposed organization, left today for New York, to scout for the best talent that had made good in grand opera and concert.

An incomplete list of the guarantors includes aside from Mrs. Armour, H. H. Merrick, Judge Wells Cook, Frederick A. Poor, Wilbur D. Nesbit, Lee S. Roberts, David H. Noyes, N. M. Kaufmann and Mr. Armour.

Weber's "Oberon" Sung Again.

Weber's "Oberon," written to English words a generation or two before opera in English became a Metropolitan problem, was performed for the fifth time on Broadway last night by Mr. Gatti's artists, and incidentally completed its round of all the Metropolitan subscription audiences. The Monday patrons, who include the owners of the house, followed with evident pleasure and some surprise the old fairy-tale scenes and charming melodies, sung by Mmes. Ponselle and Howard, Messrs. Martinelli, Althouse, Rothier, and others, ably conducted by the adapter of Weber's score, Mr. Bodanzky.

Berkshire String Quartet.

The Berkshire String Quartet gave its third and final concert at Aeolian Hall last night. The program consisted of Beethoven's Grand Fugue in B flat major, opus 133, a quartet in A minor (1895) by Henry Eichheim, and the Brahms Quartet in A minor, opus 51, No. 2. There was present an interested audience.

"LET'S BEAT IT" PLEASES.

"Let's Beat It," the first 27th Division show since "You Know Me, Al," which was presented last year, was given last night at the Century Theatre. The lively music and catchy lines of this year's musical farce so captivated the audience that no one wanted "to beat it" until the performance was over, and that was at 1 o'clock.

The book and lyrics were written in the battle areas of France when the boys were not engaged in actual fighting. Some of the performers had been slightly wounded, but even this did not hinder them from dancing gracefully and, in the case of those who were impersonating girls, from doing it in the best possible manner. The production was staged by Lieutenant William A. Halloran and Private Harry Gribble.

Majoh Gen. John F. O'Ryan, commanding the 27th Division, and Mrs. O'Ryan and party occupied a box draped with the American flag.

URGES SUFFRAGE LEAGUE.

Mrs. Catt Suggests Way to Finish Fight for Votes for Women.

ST. LOUIS, March 24.—Organization of a League of Woman Voters to finish the fight for woman suffrage and to aid in reconstruction work in America was urged by Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt of New York, President of the National American Woman Suffrage Association, in an address she delivered here tonight before the Golden Jubilee Convention of that organization. Mrs. Catt proposed this as the best and most patriotic memorial to the pioneer women of the suffrage movement. As outlined by Mrs. Catt, the chief purposes of the proposed League of Woman Voters are:

First—To use its utmost influence to obtain the final enfranchisement of the women of every State in the United States, and to aid the women of all other countries in their struggle to obtain their rights.

Second—To remove the remaining legal discriminations against women in the codes and Constitutions of the American States.

Third—To stabilize the democracy of America and "to make our democracy so safe that every citizen may feel secure, and great men will acknowledge the worthiness of the American Republic to lead."

To achieve these objects, Mrs. Catt called upon women of America to "enlist for a five years' service."

She declared that there was "a more forceful reactionary influence in this country than most of us have realized," that this is the great American menace, and that it "threatens now to wreck the reconstruction of the world." She asserted that this was shown by the blocking of the woman suffrage amendment in the Senate, by the "incredible attitude" of the Senate toward the League of Nations and by many recent expressions that "a war for democracy was mere twaddle, but that the war was really one of self-defense."

SEEK WILKINS WITNESS.

Special to The New York Times.

MINEOLA, L. I., March 24.—Audrey Munson, said to be a motion picture actress and artist model, and her mother are being sought by District Attorney Weeks in the hope that they may be able to give valuable information concerning Dr. Walter Keene Wilkins, according to county officials today. The Munsons once lived at the New York home of Dr. Wilkins in West Sixty-fifth Street, according to information received by the investigators.

Edward Riker, a ticket taker at the Flatbush Avenue, Brooklyn, station of the Long Island Railroad, told officials today that a few minutes before 7 o'clock on the night on which Mrs. Wilkins was murdered he saw her standing alone in the waiting room. He said he knew Mrs. Wilkins and wondered why she was there alone. In view of other disclosures of a similar nature, the District Attorney is of the opinion that Dr. Wilkins, having quarreled with his wife, went down to Long Beach alone.

Detectives searching the Long Beach home of the Wilkinses, outside of which the murder took place, found other evidence today, it was said. The authorities refused to divulge the nature of their discoveries.

BOLSHEVISM IN HUNGARY.

In the reports from Hungary, so obviously inspired simultaneously and from closely related sources, a certain allowance must be made for fury and the intent to deceive. The "enormous Red Armies" waiting in Galicia and the Ukraine to join their Hungarian friends will probably shrink considerably before they ever come into action, and it remains to be seen how far the Magyars are willing to let their own country go to pieces by way of revenge on their enemies. It would appear that the Magyars are trying a huge "bluff," but a bluff which they may very well carry through, and if they obtain even a measure of success it will not be long before we see the Germans following their example.

The reason is quite evident from President Karolyi's proclamation. The Magyars have realized that their persistent and far-reaching propaganda has gone for nothing, that their attempt to persuade the Allies that they were our friends even while fighting against us has broken down in the face of facts, and that justice is to be enforced against them as well as the Germans. Specifically, they know that the regions of Hungary inhabited principally by the subject nations whom the Magyars so ruthlessly misruled are going to be taken away, and that the Magyar State is to meet the fate that some of its leaders feared long ago, "confinement within its own ethnographic limits."

Rather than give up the privilege of tyrannizing over other races, the Magyars have announced their intention of renewing the war and calling in the Russians to help them; as Karolyi grandiloquently puts it, they appeal from the Peace Conference to the proletariat of the world. The Peace Conference is afraid of Bolshevism, and it has not known what to do with Bolshevism in Russia. The Magyars hope to frighten the Conference into letting them keep the Slovak counties and Transylvania, perhaps Croatia and Slavonia and the Banat.

The reports that the Polish Army is at last to be sent to Poland, that the Czechoslovaks are preparing to defend their frontier, that monitors are going up the Danube, are indications that perhaps this time the conference is going to do something. Hungary must be taught that threats of war do not pay.

THE CONSTITUTION IN ALABAMA.

> The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated, and no warrants shall issue but upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized.

Prohibition doesn't mind a little thing like this provision of the Constitution. It is the agreeable habit of officers hunting supposed violators of the Alabama prohibition laws to search persons without taking the trouble to get warrants. The officers get fat fees if they can make out a case. Many of the men whose persons and effects have been searched unconstitutionally are unaware of their rights or unwilling or unable to assert them. Fortunately, there are exceptions.

The other day the father of a Birmingham lawyer died at his house in the country. The day after the funeral the son collected his father's effects. They were put on a truck to be taken to his city house. In the city the truck was stopped by two officers who told the lawyer that they were going to search the effects. He refused to allow them to do so without a warrant, was arrested, taken to a police station. He still refused to permit the search to be made. Thereupon he was arrested on the elastic, all-covering charge of "disorderly conduct." The fee-hunters made the search. In court, next day, it was shown not only that the police had no right of arrest and search in the case, but that there was no intoxicating liquor among the effects. "When a man is pleasant about it," says the Birmingham Chief of Police pleasantly, "and does not get mad when a "policeman wants to search his prop- "erty for liquor, there is no trouble." Why, indeed, should a citizen "get mad" because, in the sacred cause of prohibition, the law and the Constitution are violated? The Birmingham City Commission says illegal arrests and searches are "necessary to "prevent the wholesale entry of con- "traband liquor." As between prohibition and the Constitution, how can anybody who is not a besotted devotee of rum stick up for the Constitution?

THE WELCOME OF THE 27TH.

Our New York soldiers who smashed the Hindenburg Line will be acclaimed today by such multitudes as were never brought together before for any such spectacle and holiday. The transformation of Fifth Avenue into a way of ordered beauty by day and of enchantment at night; the triumphs of the sculptors and architects in the Victory Arch; the Court of Honor that commemorates the unreturning brave; the Tower of Jewels, magical and multicolored of illumination, a portal for a palace of the Arabian Nights; forests of flags and isles of greenery; shield and trophy and coat of arms; all the varied brilliance and splendor of beauty and charm of perspective under the electric light or the sun—these are but decorations of the great theatre. Fifth Avenue is the stage up which our soldiers will march, cheered by an unparalleled multitude.

Those miles and miles of seats and sidewalks, those unnumbered balconies, windows, and coigns of vantage, those cross streets that will be choked with the overflow; automobiles, omnibuses, trucks, vans, giving thousands at least a peep at the show; this overpowering human mass, this million or more, shall we guess, gathered from all parts of the city, State, and the country, one in its eagerness to see and to hail with passionate welcome and plaudit these soldiers who come back bearing their palms of victory with them—here will be the marvel far transcending by its majestic unity of emotion the utmost effects of art.

For days people have been swarming into this city. Old memories, recalling all our past reviews, military and naval parades, processions, and gaudy days, will search themselves in vain to find any parallel to the preter-multitudes that are bound to show the 27th Division what their folks and friends, what all New York and all America, think of them. The calculators and diviners of the Weather Bureau promise a bland day, and mad March as sweet as Summer.

MR. TAFT AND THE LEAGUE PLAN.

From the point of view of practical probability, says Mr. Henry W. Taft in the concluding installment of his clear and enlightening examination of the plan of the League of Nations which we publish on this page today, "the menace to the Monroe Doctrine "amounts to nothing more than a "bugaboo." A multitude of bugaboos, creatures of the Senatorial imagination, have given up the ghost under the bright light of sound interpretation which Mr. Taft has thrown upon them.

In the first installment, which we published yesterday, he showed that, under accepted principles of Treaty interpretation, the construction which many critics of the League Constitution have given to its provisions is false and impossible. Today he meets objections based upon the supposed peril to our sovereignty, our Constitution, and to the Monroe Doctrine. He shows that in innumerable treaties, many of them long in existence, we have obligated ourselves to do half a score of things which, if we engaged to do them under the League Treaty, the critics of the League solemnly declare would be fatal to our sovereignty and our independence.

No discussion of the League plan, we think, has been more helpful to clear understanding than these articles prepared by Mr. Taft for The Times. They fortify the argument for the League, they make it irresistible. They may not convince extreme opponents, but at least they destroy reasonable ground of opposition.

AMERICAN DYES.

Labor conditions in Germany at the present time warrant no expectation that in the near future dyestuffs to be sold abroad will be produced there. But those manufactured some time ago may be available. "I understand," says Dr. Nichols, President of the American Chemical Society, "that plans have been completed to "ship goods already prepared, in im- "mense quantities, from Sweden, "Holland, and Switzerland, so that "their German origin will be care- "fully camouflaged." If he is not misinformed, the combined German makers of dyes are ready to seek a market here if they can find ships to carry their accumulated stock.

For the protection of a new domestic industry, carefully fostered by the Government, the importation of dyestuffs into Great Britain was prohibited by proclamation on Feb. 24, but licenses for the admission of dyes from the United States, France, and Switzerland will be granted by a Board of Trade Commission. In Japan, where a similar industry has been established since the beginning of the war, at the coming session of the Diet the Government will ask for an increase of the tariff from the present rate of 10 per cent. to 50 per cent. Our own dyestuffs industry, which in four and a half years has grown from almost nothing until it not only satisfies the domestic demand for leading colors, but also shows annual exports of $10,000,000, is defended against expected competition from Germany, the former source of supply, only by the duties imposed by the Tariff act of Sept. 8, 1916. This legislation, Mr. Culbertson of the Tariff Commission says, "accomplished its "purpose by encouraging capital to "invest in the industry."

The Commission and its Chairman, Professor Taussig, have recommended or suggested amendments which would increase several of the duties, but no action will be taken until the coming first session of the new Congress. It is possible that dyestuffs from Germany will be received at our ports before the law can be amended. Repeatedly it has been shown that the Tariff Commission desires to save the industry, which represents a large part of the $401,000,000 invested during the war in the production of "drugs, chemicals, and dyes," although it will not recommend regulation or exclusion of imports by licenses. "National policy," says Commissioner Culbertson, "seems to require protection." He adds that the new law against dumping, or unfair price-cutting of imports with the intent of destroying or injuring an industry here, "is inadequate as to both substance and procedure." Congress will be asked to improve this statute as well as to consider proposed changes in tariff rates.

MISUNDERSTANDING J. W. BAILEY.

Many of our esteemed contemporaries seem to have misunderstood the case of the Hon. Joseph Weldon Bailey of Texas. We refer to The Albany Journal, The Newark News, The Memphis Commercial-Appeal, and to a good many others, the returns not being all in yet. The Commercial-Appeal, for instance, heads its article, more in sorrow than in anger, "Good-bye, Joe." But Joe has not bidden good-bye to the Democratic Party. The party, of course, having survived many incidents of one kind or another, including the civil war, could survive the departure of Mr. Bailey; but he has not departed, he will not depart.

If there is anywhere any disposition to take Mr. Bailey lightly, it should be remembered that he is a distinguished lawyer and statesman, who, in his time, was an ornament to the Senate both for his ability to speak well and for solid knowledge. John C. Spooner was fond of crossing swords with him, and Bailey was almost the only member of the Senate to whom that brilliant Republican paid this tribute. His was no gallery popularity, though the galleries liked to hear him. The keenest minds "on that side" were confident that in meeting him they were meeting a foeman worthy of their steel, and the Republicans sent none but their best against him.

That much premised, it becomes necessary to observe that Mr. Bailey's pronunciamento was more terrifying in the index than in the book. "What I said was that I would not "vote for the candidate of any party "that insists on abridging my liber- "ties and increasing my taxes," says he. Saying this, he defies the lightning and calls on anybody who doesn't like it to read him out of the Democratic Party; but he himself won't go, and he will never, never vote a Republican ticket.

A little adroit, this. And that is all there is to it. Mr. Bailey merely calls attention in an emphatic, not to say sensational, way to certain tendencies in the Democratic Party which he thinks must be corrected. If he put it somewhat acrobatically, that is his way. Back of his too dramatic formula there lies a real truth. Mr. Bailey was talking, not to the Road Horse Association diners before whom he nominally appeared, but to Mr. Claude Kitchin and Mr. Champ Clark. They need not worry about his leaving the Democratic Party, but they might pay some heed to the warning which he dressed in that fantastic garb.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

A Puzzling Episode Considered.

Mayor Hylan doubtless will have his rewards for refusing to allow the participation in the Caruso jubilee celebration of anybody connected with his administration until he had secured the elimination of James M. Beck from among those who were to pay oratorical tribute to the great tenor.

First of the rewards, one must assume, is that given to the Mayor by his own conscience, and that is always very precious. Next, as what he did was just what would be liked by those who like that sort of thing, he will have the praise of all who liked it, and praises are always sweet. Again, the display of power is enjoyable, especially when it creates a sensation and makes a lot of talk, and there is material for much conversation in what the Mayor did.

On the other hand, there are penalties to pay when one does something that offends, irritates, or grieves large numbers of people, for they, too, will talk—will express opinions and seek for motives—and their comments are lamentably likely to be uncharitable and even harsh.

These well-known truths the Mayor, it is to be presumed, carefully balanced in his mind before, without warning and contrary to what had been supposed to be his purpose, he imposed upon the managers of the celebration the alternative of submitting to his coercion as regards Mr. Beck or of losing from their program the flag presentation that counted among its most important features. Thanks, however, to Mr. Beck's prompt subordination of his personal rights and feelings to the larger interests of the occasion, it was not necessary to make this difficult choice, and Mr. Caruso received his flag as had been planned.

He Sentences Without Prosecution.

Precisely why Mayor Hylan demanded the suppression of Mr. Beck's speech is not certain. The explanation given by or for the Mayor is that recent remarks by Mr. Beck about President Wilson and the League of Nations were unfair, untrue, unpatriotic. It must be admitted that the Mayor is not alone in finding fault with the speech to which he refers. Criticism of it, indeed, extended far beyond the circle in which the Mayor has his being, but, as no legal action, civil or criminal, was taken by anybody as a result of what Mr. Beck said, the presumption is that it contained nothing that was actionable.

That being the case, there seems to be no justification for taking the stand that hereafter Mr. Beck is to be permitted to make no public utterances on any subject. Not only was it more than improbable on general principles that Mr. Beck would utilize the Caruso celebration for a further exposition of his disagreement with the President, but many people did know, and the Mayor could have known, exactly what Mr. Beck purposed to say. There was nothing in his speech that could have offended the most sensitive of the President's friends—not even the Mayor and the Mayor's friends, whose sensitiveness, as all are well aware, is almost morbidly delicate.

What little the speech contained besides appreciation of Mr. Caruso as singer and man was good, sound American doctrine. Obviously Mr. Beck was not looking for trouble, and the Mayor provided it quite gratuitously. That he did so gives some plausibility to Mr. Beck's own theory of the episode, which is that it was due, not to his criticism of President Wilson's policies, but to what he had said and done previously to the displeasure and embarrassment of—well, of persons of whom it cannot be said that they are loved and respected by all.

Conditions Before the Armistice.

A reason hitherto unmentioned, so far as can be remembered, was offered in his lecture Sunday evening by Major Gen. Sir Frederick Maurice to explain why Marshal Foch, on Nov. 11, granted an armistice to the Germans instead of carrying on the war for the few days more that would have been required for bringing about the destruction or capture of all the Kaiser's forces in the west. That this was not done—that the Germans were not deprived of their last excuse for denying full defeat—has been much discussed, especially by nonmilitary critics, and some of them have ventured to express the opinion that the war ended too soon.

General Maurice, whose knowledge of war is that of an experienced soldier and recognized expert, does not share this opinion. Not only did he say, as many others have said, and as Marshal Foch himself has been quoted as saying, that further fighting would have cost, for results not worth getting, the lives of many of the allied troops; he mentioned as an additional reason that Marshal Foch had to consider the difficulty of movement over territory where all means of communication had been destroyed with Teutonic attention to detail.

This, of course, is far from an admission that a further advance by the Allies would have been dangerous to them and might have ended in disaster. It only calls attention to the fact that the troubles of an army increase with distance from its bases of supply, and that each mile of allied progress into the devastated region tended to render more feasible another more or less effective stand by the Germans. The latter had themselves suffered heavily from poor communications, similarly caused, when they made their great drive, and Marshal Foch, who had so skillfully taken advantage of the embarrassments thus caused, was not the man to forget them when the conditions were reversed.

TO THOSE WHO RETURN.

You who have fought and lived, and fought again,
And mocked the fears that frighten lesser men,
We bid you welcome home! We offer thanks
That such as you were called to quell the ranks
Of Evil; that your will and arms endured
Till now our threatened freedom is secured!

You who have shared in Freedom's War, and known
The woes unspeakable that rocked her throne—
You who have helped to crown her brows anew
With olive and with laurel—unto you
We raise our hearts in gratitude and praise;
Forgive our halting speech, our tinkling lays!

We greet you, and we offer thanks for all—
The will obedient to an inward call,
The faith that fought through darkness of despair,
The flawless courage, strong to do or bear,
The golden heart that laughed discomfort down,
That made no bid for pity or renown.

We offer thanks for these, and for the spoils
Which recompense your vigils and your toils—
Such spoils as never ancient warriors brought
From glowing shores where pagan chieftains fought,
Fine gold, rich gems, Damascus steel, their gain,

Gleams with a special loveliness and grace,
Whenever Tyranny its fangs lays bare,
And makes a world its pestilential lair!

You fought for Liberty! (How many died!)
See that you guard her purifying flame!
The dross of senseless, narrow, racial pride,
The small conceits that spot a nation's fame—
Purge clean these blots! Blend to one perfect whole
Their aims and ours who fought for Freedom's soul!

THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS COVENANT

An Analysis of Its Provisions for Bringing About the Objects in View, International Cooperation and International Peace.

By HENRY W. TAFT.

CONSTITUTIONALITY

Mr. Knox contends that the covenants of the League are in violation of the Federal Constitution (1) in that they place the power of declaring war in the hands of the Executive Council; (2) because the limit of armament when adopted by the several governments, cannot be exceeded without the permission of the Executive Council; (3) because no treaty made by this country will become binding until it has become registered with the Secretary General of the League; (4) in that situations might arise under Article XVI. relating to financial and economic measures for the support of other members of the League calling for unconstitutional action by this government; and (5) in that under Article XX. freedom of transit and equitable treatment for commerce stipulated for, might require the making of laws which Congress ought not to make, and yet if it did not make them it might find itself in a position where the omission to make them would bring on war.

If there is anything in Mr. Knox's constitutional objections, similar objections may be made to most of the treaties to which this country has been a party since the foundation of the government. He fails to give due consideration to the peculiar character under our Constitution of the treaty-making power.

The objection that the League would deprive the House of Representatives of its constitutional powers was the subject of fervid controversy in the discussions in the Constitutional Convention of 1787; and since that time the attempt to make the House a potential agency in the negotiation of treaties with foreign countries has been repeated many times, but without success. Few treaties have been made which have been self-executing, that is, enforcible without supplementary action by the House of Representatives in the appropriation of money or in some other strictly legislative act. The fact that such legislation is necessary does not render a treaty unconstitutional.

George Mason and Gouverneur Morris vigorously objected in the Constitutional Convention of 1787 to making the treaty power independent of the legislative power, urging that no treaty should be "binding on the United States which is not ratified by law"; and James Wilson urged that "as treaties are to have the operation of laws, they ought to have the sanction of laws also." But all such objections were overruled, and Article VI. of the Constitution was made to provide that treaties should be "the Supreme Law of the Land."

Hamilton argued that the making of treaties was neither an executive nor a legislative function, adding, "It relates neither to the execution of the subsisting laws nor to the enaction of new ones, but still less to an exercise of the common strength. Its objects are contract with foreign nations which have the force of law but derive it from the obligations of good faith." (Federalist No. 75 (74.) In his letters to Washington (Crandall's Treaties, p. 170,) Hamilton also said that it was "one thing that a treaty pledging the faith of the nation should by force of moral duty oblige the legislative will to carry it into effect" and "quite another that it should be itself a law." He called attention to the fact that treaties common among nations included indemnification, pecuniary or otherwise, stipulations for the union of military forces, and the furnishing of pecuniary or other aid, and the regulation of external commerce, and unless the treaty power could embrace such objects, "it would even be inadequate for mere treaties of peace, and always so for treaties of alliance and of commerce." The Constitution provides no method of compelling the House of Representatives to act, but a legal discretion to refuse the execution of a treaty is virtually a power to repeal it. Hence Hamilton concludes "that the House of Representatives have no moral power to refuse the execution of a treaty which is not contrary to the Constitution, because it pledges the public faith; and have no legal power to refuse its execution because it is a law—unless at least it ceases to be a law by regular act of revocation of the competent authority."

In 1792 Mr. Jefferson negotiated a treaty with Algiers which required the payment of money and was asked by President Washington whether he should not wait until the treaty had been ratified by both houses of Congress. Jefferson expressed the opinion that the ratification by the House of Representatives was not necessary, but said that it "might be incautious to commit himself by a ratification with a foreign nation where he might be left in the lurch in the execution." (Vol. I., Writings of Thomas Jefferson, p. 216.) Washington declined to wait, saying that if Congress would not do "what the Constitution called on them to do, the Government would be at an end, and must then assume another form." Subsequently, in 1796, the House of Representatives requested President Washington to lay before it a copy of the instructions to the Minister of the United States who negotiated the Jay treaty with Great Britain, together with the correspondence and other documents relative thereto. He declined to comply with the request, saying:

"It is thus that the treaty-making power has been understood by foreign nations, and in all the treaties made with them we have declared that they have believed that when ratified by the President, with the advice and consent of the Senate, they became obligatory. In this construction of the Constitution, every House of Representatives has heretofore acquiesced and until the present time not a doubt or suspicion has appeared to my knowledge that this construction was not the true one; nay, they have more than acquiesced, for till now, without controverting the obligation of such treaties they have made all the requisite provisions for carrying them into effect."

He added that "it is essential to the due administration of the Government that the boundaries fixed by the Constitution between the different departments should be preserved."

Chief Justice Ellsworth, who had been a member of the Constitutional Convention, after his appointment as Chief Justice of the United States, expressed a similar view, saying that the obligation to carry out the provisions of a treaty "is as indispensable as it is to appropriate for the President's salary or that of the Judges, or in any other cases where fidelity to the Constitution does not leave an option to refuse."

This view of the treaty-making power under the Constitution has always been adhered to and has received the sanction of the Supreme Court. In Foster vs. Neilson, Chief Justice Marshall said: "Our Constitution declares a treaty to be the law of the land. It is consequently to be regarded in courts of justice as equivalent to an act of the Legislature whenever it operates of itself without the aid of any legislative provision." In Geofroy vs. Riggs, Mr. Justice Field said: "The treaty power as expressed in the Constitution is in terms unlimited except by those restraints which are found in that instrument against the action of the Government or of its departments, and those arising from the nature of the Government itself and that of the States. It would not be contended that it extends so far as to authorize what the Constitution forbids or a change in the character of the Government or in that of one of the States or a cession of any portion of the territory of the latter, without its consent. * * * But with these exceptions it is not perceived that there is any limit to the questions which can be adjusted touching any matter which is properly the subject of negotiation with a foreign country."

It is true that if a treaty and an act of Congress are "inconsistent the one last in date will control the other, provided always the stipulation of the treaty on the subject is self-executing." Field, J., in Whitney vs. Robertson, 124 U. S., 190, 194; United States vs. Lee Yen Tai, 185 U. S., 213, 220. But any question as to carrying treaties into effect has rarely arisen, since the House of Representatives has almost uniformly recognized the broad sweep of the treaty-making power and has promptly acted to enable the nation honorably to perform its treaty obligations. The matter has never been presented with reference to an obligation assumed in a treaty to levy war, but it may be safely asserted that the principle applicable to that situation would not be different from that applying to any other legislative power requiring for its exercise the action of the House of Representatives.

NATIONAL SOVEREIGNTY.

Precisely what is meant by the assertion that the League involves an impairment of national sovereignty it is difficult to understand. It has no possible foundation, except in the mistaken assumption that the Executive Council practically is given the power to make war and to enforce a boycott under Article XVI., and that it is in such minority in the Council that the delegation of power amounts to an abdication of sovereignty in what may prove to be vital national matters. But it is to be borne in mind that a treaty is a bargain with another country, in which the idea of sovereignty becomes more theoretical than real, since the interest of the people of a nation requires their Government in every treaty to limit their freedom of action. In consideration of benefits obtained by each nation, it makes concessions which are a restriction upon its sovereign rights. There is no limit in the Constitution of the United States upon the extent to which this country can thus by treaty limit its sovereignty, except that it may not change the form of government of the United States or part with territory belonging to one of the States without the consent of that State. It is clear that the treaty-making power extends to agreements to make or refrain from making war, to levy a commercial boycott, to submit disputes to compulsory arbitration, to guarantee protection to the territory of another nation, and adopt offensive or defensive measures looking to a state of war. All such agreements, of course, materially detract from the theoretical sovereignty of a nation, but they are, nevertheless, clearly within the treaty-making power.

As early as 1817, by the Rush-Bagot treaty, this country and Great Britain agreed to limit their naval armament upon the lakes forming the boundary between this country and Canada, and that agreement has been continued and respected ever since. In 1842, by the Webster-Ashburton treaty, Great Britain and this country agreed that they would maintain a naval force on the coast of Africa for the suppression of the slave trade, the forces of the two nations to act in concert and co-operation.

By the Clayton-Bulwer treaty of 1850, between Great Britain and the United States, which related to the subject of a ship canal between the Atlantic and the Pacific Oceans, the two countries guaranteed the neutrality of the canal and agreed that if the canal should be undertaken by certain persons, their property should be protected from unjust confiscation, seizure, or violence. Every other friendly nation was invited to join in the stipulations. The treaty also declared that neither of the two high contracting parties would ever "obtain or maintain for itself any exclusive control over the said ship canal; agreeing that neither will ever erect or maintain any fortifications commanding the same or in the vicinity thereof, or occupy, or fortify, or colonize, or assume, or exercise, any dominion over Nicaragua, Costa Rica, the Mosquito Coast, or any part of Central America; nor will either make use of any protection which either affords or may afford, or any alliance which either has or may have to or with any State or people, for the purpose of erecting or maintaining any such fortifications; or of occupying, fortifying, or colonizing Nicaragua, Costa Rica, the Mosquito Coast, or any part of Central America, or assuming or exercising dominion over the same; nor will the United States or Great Britain take advantage of any intimacy or use any alliance, connection or influence that either may possess with any State or Government through whose territory the said canal may pass, for the purpose of acquiring or holding, directly or indirectly, for the citizens or subjects of the one any rights or advantages in regard to commerce or navigation through the said canal which shall not be offered on the same terms to the citizens or subjects of the other."

The Clayton-Bulwer treaty also provided that vessels of the two high contracting parties should be exempt in case of war between them, from blockade, detention, or capture. The restrictions upon the sovereignty of the United States by this treaty are so obvious that they need no comment except to say that they have a peculiar significance, in view of the present discussion, because the restrictions relate to a country in the Western Hemisphere, and may be fairly construed as tending to impair the full application of the Monroe Doctrine.

In 1846, by Article 35 of a treaty with Colombia, the United States guaranteed "positively and efficaciously * * * the perfect neutrality" of the Isthmus of Panama. The significance of this provision is that it necessarily involved, in case of a violation of neutrality, the use of armed forces of this country for the performance of its obligations. By a treaty with Honduras in 1864, the United States guaranteed the neutrality of the Honduras Railroad, and engaged with that country that it should not be seized or confiscated. By the treaty with Nicaragua, made in 1867, the United States extended its protection to all routes of communication between the Atlantic and Pacific, and guaranteed "neutrality and innocent use thereof." It was stipulated that military force might be employed, but on the condition only that it should be authorized by Congress. In 1901, the Panama Canal treaty was made with Panama, by which it was provided that the canal could never be blockaded, and that no act of hostility could be committed within it. The principle of neutralization of the canal was recognized. In 1903, by treaty with Panama, this country guaranteed and agreed to maintain the independence of the Republic of Panama. In 1889, by the treaty with Germany and Great Britain, the signatory powers recognized the neutrality of the Samoan Islands and provided that the three powers should have equal rights within the islands. The three signatory nations undertook a guardianship of the islands similar to that which is contemplated in the proposed Constitution of the League with reference to backward countries.

Within the last half dozen years, the President has negotiated treaties which were ratified by the Senate, (i. e., the Bryan treaties "For the Advancement of Peace") with Guatemala, Norway, Portugal, Great Britain, Costa Rica, Spain, Sweden, Denmark, France, Uruguay, Peru, Paraguay, Italy, Russia, China, Chile, Ecuador, Honduras, Brazil, and Bolivia, in each of which, in practically identical language, we have agreed that disputes arising between this country and the other countries named be submitted for investigation and report to an International Commission, and that while such investigation was proceeding we would not resort to war for the satisfaction of our rights. The objection of the opponents of the League based on the fact that the power to declare war is vested by the Constitution in Congress would apply to all of these treaties; and furthermore, the suspension of the exercise of that power is during the period when the dispute is being considered by an International Commission, to be selected in such manner that in most cases a majority of the commission will come from nations other than those who are parties to the dispute. In other words, the power of Congress to declare war is suspended, while a commission, composed of members a majority of whom are not American citizens, is proceeding to determine whether we are right in the dispute. And yet I do not think it has been seriously contended that the Bryan treaties are unconstitutional or unduly detracted from the sovereignty of the nation.

Thus it appears that under the treaty-making power, and without the concurrence of Congress, we have made treaties for the reduction of armament, the maintenance of armed forces in foreign territory, the fixing of boundaries, the maintenance of neutrality of territory belonging to other nations, the guarantee of the independence of other nations, the compulsory arbitration of disputed matters, and the postponement of war during that process, the participation by this country with other countries in the affairs and government of backward nations, a restriction upon the right to erect fortifications for the protection of property in which this country is interested and with reference to which it assumes a responsibility, and an appropriation of money in order to make all such treaties effective. The Constitution of the League of Nations, excepting that it deals in a single treaty with a greater number of nations and a greater variety of subjects, does not require an invasion of the sovereignty of the United States to a greater extent than that involved in the treaties above enumerated; or, if it does, the greater concessions are justified by the lofty and beneficent purpose to insure a lasting and universal peace.

MONROE DOCTRINE.

Mr. Knox and other opponents of the League urge that it will take from the Monroe Doctrine its life. It is true that in the present form of Article X., and if unanimity were not required in the Executive Council, an "external aggression" upon one of the nations in the Western Hemisphere might lead to the intervention of some European or Asiatic nation. But that would be highly improbable. Neither European nor Asiatic nations would care to concern themselves with the affairs of the Western Hemisphere, and would be only too willing to permit the United States to continue to carry out its traditional policy. Judged from the standpoint of probabilities, therefore, the menace to the Monroe Doctrine amounts to nothing more than a bugaboo. But it will not affect materially the principle of the Constitution of the League if Article X. is amended as suggested above so as provide that in the event that military force is necessary, it shall be supplied in the first instance by the member State who, by reason of geographical proximity and national interest, is best fitted to undertake the task. By such an amendment all danger to the Monroe Doctrine will be removed and the principle of the doctrine will be extended to the entire world.

The Position of Senator Knox and Senator Lodge.

The debate between Senator Lodge and President Lowell has advanced the discussion of the League very materially. It has made the difference in the positions of Senator Lodge and Senator Knox irreconcilable. Senator Knox has burned his bridges. No kind of a league can be devised which will overcome his objections. Senator Lodge seems to have felt the force of growing public opinion in favor of constructive rather than destructive criticism. Senator Knox's speech is filled with metaphysical and meticulous analysis which ignores the clearly expressed intention of the document; and feeling the pressure from the public for constructive suggestions, he proposes remedies which he does not put in practical or definite shape, but which would subject them, in far greater degree than the present constitution of the League, to his own objections to that document on the ground of constitutionality and sovereignty. Senator Lodge, on the other hand, in his debate with President Lowell, has come very close to the position of the strongest advocates of the League in this country. His specific suggestions are (1) that the Executive Council should act by a unanimous vote, except where otherwise provided; (2) that there should be a larger reservation in favor of the Monroe Doctrine; (3) that there should be a definite covenant permitting member States to withdraw from the League; (4) that questions of immigration should be expressly declared to be not within the power of the League; (5) that there should be a provision that the boycott under Article XVI. should be expressly stated to be a domestic question and not within the power of the League; and (6) that in Article X. there should be a provision which would avoid our having to send our army and navy to maintain the territorial integrity of another member of the League at some distant part of the earth. All of these suggestions are constructive and useful, and most of them ought to be adopted, although it may be difficult to obtain a broader reservation of the Monroe Doctrine, since that would evoke from Japan, Great Britain, France, and Italy a demand for some specific reservation concerning their relation to countries within their area of influence, which would lead to complications. I believe Lord Robert Cecil, who had more to do with drawing the Constitution of the League than any other member of the Peace Council, is correct in saying that "if the Monroe Doctrine means, as I believe it does, that there ought to be no interference with affairs on the American continent by European powers without the consent of the United States, then I say that the doctrine is strengthened by the League of Nations."

It is much wiser to deal with that kind of a question in general language. It would not be objectionable, and from the standpoint of this country would be desirable, if Senator Lodge's suggestions concerning the tariff and immigration could be adopted in some form, although in my view of the character of the treaty-making power the reservation is not necessary. It would serve the purpose, however, of allaying apprehensions on the part of patriotic Americans who have "reverence for the laws ourselves have made," and I cannot see how it would be objectionable to the other nations. Some general phrase could be inserted substantially to the effect that it was not the intention to vest in the Executive Council, or the Body of Delegates, power to deal with any question which, under rules of international law, is within the domestic jurisdiction and polity of the member States. Aside from the specific objections of Senator Lodge above referred to, his criticism is general and not of a character which he or any other responsible Senator would regard as an adequate reason for voting against a treaty of peace containing the proposed covenants. He says that the treaty is "very loosely and obscurely drawn"; that it "ought to be in legal, statutory, or constitutional language." Excepting for actual omissions, the chief defect of the constitution is prolixity and involved style. But treaties are not statutes, and they have always contained expressions of intention, good-will, and sentiment, and have adopted a phraseology quite different from that deemed necessary in statutes. As there is no Supreme Court for their enforcement, they are based on good faith, and this has led to some laxity in forms of expression. The statements concerning the ambiguities of the Constitution of the League are somewhat exaggerated, however, and I do not believe that a Secretary of State would have difficulty in interpreting it in a manner which would avoid serious prejudice to this country.

I agree with Senator Lodge that the President ought to have discussed with the Senate such an important matter as the League of Nations. The President's aversion to conferences I heartily disapprove of. Although it is in accordance with historical precedent that negotiations with foreign nations should originate through our State Department, and, of course, ultimately be approved by the President, the working arrangement has usually been that the Foreign Affairs Committee of the Senate has been taken into formal or informal conference at an early stage of the proceedings, and, practically speaking, in that way the "advice" of the Senate has been obtained. That ought to have been done in the case of the League of Nations, before the President went to Europe the first time. He ought also to have discussed (as he did not) with the Foreign Affairs Committee of the Senate the League of Nations upon his recent return to this country, and to have invited from them suggestions of changes in the form of the Constitution. His failure to do any of these things has excited antagonism and has made the controversy now raging much more bitter than it ought to be. He has excited partisan feelings and his course has been calculated to arouse suspicion that he was not blind to the partisan advantage that he and his party might ultimately obtain through the instrumentality of the League of Nations. But, however just the criticisms of the President may be in this respect, the situation must be dealt with in a practical way. Senator Lodge suggests that a special session of the Senate be called, and that then the Senate will suggest amendments and send them to Paris. Such course is utterly impracticable now. It is too late. Individual Senators should make their specific suggestions as Senator Lodge has now done. The Senate cannot avoid the ultimate responsibility for rejecting the treaty by urging that they should have been permitted as a body to submit amendments at some earlier time. The difficulty is, that most of the Senators who have been most active in opposition have failed to make any helpful and constructive suggestions. Their obvious effort is to defeat the League of Nations, and to compel the Peace Council to make a peace without inserting the covenants for the League. But if they fail in this effort, as I think they are bound to do, they may find themselves in the dilemma where they must vote for or against a League which they might perhaps, by constructive suggestions, have improved.

PLAN DISEASE FIGHT IN MANY COUNTRIES

ANNOUNCE BUDGET FOR 1919

Provides $3,726,504 for Medical Education, Including Hospital and Schools in China.

The Rockefeller Foundation plans to spend approximately $6,750,000 during the coming year, this being the estimated income of the fund. According to the budget, which has been announced, $2,367,130 will be for public health and $3,726,504 for medical education. The other items of the budget include $103,000 for miscellaneous payments and $146,662 for administration.

The public health activities will consist chiefly of efforts against yellow fever, tuberculosis in France, malaria and hookworm. The yellow fever commission, headed by General William C. Gorgas, will sail shortly for Central and South America, and it is hoped that it will succeed in entirely eliminating the disease. The Commission on Tuberculosis, which during the war was operating in France with the American Red Cross, will continue its work on an enlarged scale at the request of the French authorities. Demonstrations showing how to control malaria will be carried on in two of the Southern States, and a campaign against hookworm will be waged not only in twelve States of America but in twenty-one foreign States and countries as well.

In addition to this public health work to be carried out by the Foundation's International Health Board, appropriations have been made for studies in mental hygiene by the National Committee for Mental Hygiene and Public Health at Johns Hopkins University, and for the development of public health nursing.

The chief work of the Foundation in medical education, according to the announcement made yesterday, will be in connection with the development of training in modern scientific medicine in China. The Foundation's China Medical Board is organizing a medical centre at Peking, which will be opened in the Fall, and it is planned to open another medical school and hospital at Shanghai. It is the plan of the Foundation to co-operate with other organizations already established in China and to furnish fellowships for medical study in America by Chinese physicians and nurses and by medical missionaries on furlough.

Additional expenditures which have been authorized are for the Rockefeller Institute of Medical Research and toward a contribution of $1,000,000 made two years ago for the development of the medical school of the University of Chicago.

The Foundation will continue its war work program this year, and at the request of the War Department will maintain the War Demonstration Hospital. It will assist in the care and treatment of soldiers mentally and nervously disabled.

The report of expenditures for last year shows that $6,201,735 was given for camp and community welfare, $350,558 for medical research and relief, $4,455,491 for humanitarian aid, $1,255,990 for public health, and $2,419,866 for medical education and research. The total expenditure by the Foundation was $15,052,760, as compared with $11,456,950 in the preceding year.

CIRCUS GETTING READY.

Settles Down to Hard Week of Preparation After All-Night Arrival.

Following a night of strenuous labor the combined circus marvels of the Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey were all safely housed in Madison Square Garden by daylight yesterday. Following a week of rehearsals they will be ready for the opening performance next Saturday afternoon.

Incoming steamers brought the European contingent of performers, numbering several hundred, and eighty-five cars of railway equipment brought the paraphernalia and animals from the Winter quarters at Bridgeport, Conn. Yesterday, with a regiment of employes at work, the big show presented a picture of strenuous activity as it prepared for the season's campaign.

An innovation in equestrianism will be a feature of this season's circus. More than thirty numbers in the long program depend upon the beauty and intelligence of the horse for the results achieved. One acrobatic scene presents fifty-six famous gymnasts occuping all three rings, four stages, and the Hippodrome Oval in a single number. The clown contingent numbers more than 50, and the zoological collection has 110 cages, pens, tanks, and lairs, containing many new specimens of wild animals.

HALIFAX, N. S., March 24.—The steamer Melrose, which left St. Nazaire on March 9 for New York, sent out wireless calls for help today, saying that she was in distress. A message picked up here said that the ship had lost her rudder.

The message gave the position of the Melrose as latitude 33.35, longitude 50.50. If these figures are correct, they would indicate that the steamer had drifted far to the southward of her course, as the position given is about 900 miles almost due east of Bermuda.

The Melrose registers 3,391 tons.

Mail Airplane Capsizes Over Town.

PARIS, March 24.—One of the two airplanes which inaugurated the postal service yesterday between Paris and Bordeaux capsized over Libourne, about twenty miles northeast of Bordeaux, because of engine trouble. The pilot and his passenger, M. Caudillere, an editor of the Havas News Agency, were severely injured and taken to a military hospital.

SUPPORT DR. WARD.

Methodist Clergymen Pass Resolution Condemning Bolshevism Charge

The attempt said to have been made recently by enemies of the Rev. Harry F. Ward, Professor of Christian Ethics in the Union Theological Seminary, to make him out as a Bolshevik failed yesterday when a resolution was passed at the weekly meeting of the Methodist preachers at 150 Fifth Avenue in support of Dr. Ward.

The meeting yesterday passed a resolution condemning the publishers' section of the Graded Sunday School Lessons of the Methodist Episcopal Church for eliminating from the course of study for Sunday schools a book by Dr. Ward called "The Bible in Social Living." The action of the publishers' syndicate, it was said, followed the publication of a statement issued by Dr. Ward asking that Methodist clergymen suspend judgment on Bolshevism until all the evidence in the case was available.

Dr. Ward refused to talk of the incident yesterday, but his friends gave the following version of the afffair: Some years ago, they said, there was a dispute concerning union labor in the publishing syndicate of the Methodist Church. Dr. Ward was asked by the Federation for Social Service, of which he was Secretary, to investigate the trouble. He did so, and subsequently the New York branch of the Methodist publishers permitted the entrance of union labor into their plant, while union printers were barred in the Chicago and Cincinnati sections of the publishing syndicate.

Ever since his investigation, it was said, the Cincinnati and Chicago publishers have been antagonistic to Dr. Ward. Lately there was circulated a statement purporting to have been made by Professor Ward in a religious publication to the effect that the aim of the Bolsheviki was the creation of a State composed entirely of producers and controlled by producers. This was a Scriptural aim, Dr. Ward said. The quotation as it was circulated did not give what followed in the original statement. The omitted part was that Dr. Ward said it did not appear how the aim of the Bolsheviki would work out in practice.

"Social unrest in the United States" was the subject of Dr. Ward's address yesterday to the clergymen. He told of the necessity for the Church to sympathize with labor. He was awarded a vote of thanks for his talk at the conclusion of the meeting, and the ovation accorded him by the ministers satisfied his friends that the majority of the members were pleased with his course. The resolution condemning the action of the publishers was passed by a substantial majority vote.

WAR ROMANCE IN WEDDING.

Miss Jeanne S. Haight to Marry Capt. W. G. Walker Thursday.

A war-time romance will culminate in the marriage, on Thursday, of Miss Jeanne S. Haight, daughter of Mrs. E. J. Haight of Astoria, L. I., and Captain W. George Walker of the 350th Infantry of Minneapolis, Minn. Archdeacon C. H. Webb is to officiate, the ceremony to be held at the home of the bride's mother.

Miss Haight is the sister of Lieutenant Theodore Haight, one of the American aces in France, and it was while she was in service with the Red Cross canteen at the Thirty-fourth Street Ferry in Long Island City, that she first met her fiance. This was last August when the Captain was on his way to Camp Upton with his company. Later he left for France, and they corresponded until he returned from overseas last month. Captain Walker is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Walker of Minneapolis.

JONAS SUES HEARST PAPER.

Seeks $250,000 Damages for Editorial on Beck Incident.

The complaint in the $250,000 libel suit brought by Nathan S. Jonas, former Chairman of the Brooklyn Victory Celebration Committee, against the Star Publishing Company, publishers of The Evening Journal, has been served upon the defendant company by Jonas & Neuburger, attorneys for the plaintiff. The action is based on an editorial in The Evening Journal on Jan. 31, which followed Mr. Jonas's refusal to withdraw James M. Beck as a speaker at the mass meeting at the Brooklyn Academy of Music, on Jan. 29.

The complaint sets forth that Mr. Jonas has been for many years engaged in patriotic, philanthropic and other public movements; that he is known to many persons, not personally, but through reputation, and that the publication of the editorial conveyed the impression that Mr. Jonas had been brutal and unjust in his conduct at the Academy of Music mass meeting; that he lacked patriotism; was a mere self-seeking politician, and that all this was published with the knowledge of its falsity and with the malicious purpose of injuring Mr. Jonas in his standing in the community.

The complaint charges that in publishing the editorial the defendant company intended, and was understood by persons reading the article, to mean that in presiding at the meeting on Jan. 29, Mr. Jonas had acted in a despotic, contemptible, and disgraceful manner, and had caused persons properly attending the meeting to be arbitrarily and brutally ejected.

in the future his home at Oyster Bay be put in the possession and custody of an association, to be preserved like Mount Vernon, so that the people of the country might go to the familiar scenes of his life. As to the other, I think there is but one place to which similarly all the people might go, and that is the capital of the nation, where he lived so long. I think that there should be at some appropriate place a great memorial erected to Mr. Roosevelt like that of Washington, and Lincoln, and Grant, a monument looking out over the whole city, the White House, the Capitol, the monument to Washington and the memorial to Lincoln, over all the woodlands over which he wandered on foot and horseback, a monument looking down on a field which he developed and where his work was chiefly done."

Senator Kellogg agreed with the view of Mr. Root as to the monument and then suggested that Americanism as believed in and preached by Colonel Roosevelt should be taught in the colleges and high schools of the country. He said that there is a great demand throughout the country to put the life and teachings of Colonel Roosevelt before the people of the country and that he hoped some way could be found to do this.

General Wood said that he approved of the suggestion of Mr. Root, as did also Governor Goodrich and Governor Beeckman of Rhode Island. The preservation of the Roosevelt home at Oyster Bay as a memorial was indorsed by the Rev. Dr. William T. Manning, rector of Trinity Parish; Walter Damrosch, Gifford Pinchot, and Robert R. Morton, successor of Booker Washington as head of Tuskegee Institute.

Gives Family Views.

"I think, perhaps," he said, "that you might like to know just what mother and the family have been thinking about. In general the family felt that they were afraid of the intangible, representing to them the type of institution where foundations were created for purposes which might be perverted into other uses when the present directorate had died. The foundation would then be perverted and would carry with it father's name and would give a false impression of what he stood for. The three things that appeal to the family were a tangible memorial of the national type, that is, a monument at Washington, the park at Oyster Bay, which was the place he was so fond of, and the suggestions that came concerning the preservation of wild life. These are the three things which appealed to the family."

The final approved plans suggested by the Goodrich Committee and approved by the General Committee were announced by Colonel Thompson last night. The occasion was a dinner at which Colonel Thompson was the host to fellow-members of the committee. In making the announcement Colonel Thompson said:

"The meeting of the Roosevelt Permanent Memorial National Committee today was marked by great earnestness, and as a result of the action taken the movement will now be organized by States. The eager desire of the countless friends and followers of Colonel Roosevelt to express in something more enduring than words the admiration and devotion they felt for him will, I believe, be thoroughly satisfied by the committee's decision to erect on the one hand the monument, which shall be a symbol of his greatness, and, on the other hand, to establish a Roosevelt Society which shall be an instrument to develop and apply his policies and ideals."

The acceptances to date of membership on the T. Roosevelt Permanent Memorial National Committee was also announced last night. They are as follows:

Carl Akeley, New York.
Governor R. Livingston Beeckman of Rhode Island.

GIANTS DO REAL HARD DAY'S WORK

SCHUPP TRIES HIS ARM

Special to The New York Times.

GAINESVILLE, Fla., March 24.—McGraw showed little mercy on his athletes today and sent them through two hard practices. It was a wonderful day for training purposes and the Giant leader decided to get the full benefit of it. The men tonight appeared pretty well used up, but most of the players seemed satisfied. They felt that the harder they worked the quicker they would get soreness out of their muscles.

McGraw admits that he intends to push the men. "We have only about two weeks of introductory training work this year and I've got to get the men into condition quickly," he said.

Benny Kauff, the new Giant benedict, and Jim Thorpe, the famous Indian athlete, got in early this morning, and McGraw had thirty-seven players out today. No one now is missing but Perritt and Anderson, the unsigned pitchers, and Fred Toney, who remains the guest of the State of Tennessee. Kauff did not bring his bride along.

This morning McGraw used only young pitchers in the batting practice, but in the afternoon he sent in his regulars and near regulars, Benton, Schupp, Barnes, George Smith, and Causey. With the shortage of pitchers on the team this year George Smith will have the chance of his life. This former Columbia man has been threatening to develop into a great pitcher for several years, but he never quite came up to expectations. They called him the second Matty when he first came to the Giants from Columbia in 1916, but he never has filled out as much as McGraw expected.

Schupp, pitching to the batters in practice, was closely watched. It is too early to tell anything about Schupp's real condition, as he has not yet attempted his famous hook ball, which was the secret of his success. However, he is well satisfied with the way his arm and shoulder feel after several days of hard work, and says he feels no pain outside of the usual stiffness which all players undergo in the first week of hard training.

McGraw today lined up the regular team in both batting practice and in the field. With Kauff in the game, he placed the men as follows: Burns, Young, Chase, Kauff, Doyle, Zimmerman, Fletcher, McCarty, and Smith. Chase looked very good in the field this afternoon, and made some of the famous one-handed stops which made him such a favorite with the New York fans when he played on the New York Americans.

Earl Smith, the young catcher from Rochester, had on a Giant uniform for the first time today. He has a fine build for a catcher, and is about the size of Otto Miller of the Brooklyns, but is very fast. He handles himself like a real ball player, and, considering that this was his first day in camp, he shot the ball around the infield at a pretty lively pace. However, he had been boiling out at Hot Springs, which is his home town, and also did some work, judging from his fine condition.

George Gibson, who is here coaching the Giants' pitching youngsters, likely will sign Bill Holden, the former Yankee outfielder, who is here as a free agent, for his Toronto club.

BASEBALL HEARING TODAY.

Federal League Suit Postponed at Washington Yesterday.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—Trial of the $900,000 treble damage suit, under the Sherman anti-trust law, of the Baltimore Federal Baseball League Club against National and American League Clubs and former Federal League officials was ordered today to begin tomorrow before Associate Justice Stafford of the District of Columbia (Federal) Supreme Court.

Chairman Herrmann of the National Commission, President Heydler of the National League, Ban Johnson, President of the American League, and other baseball magnates were in court today expecting the trial to begin, but Justice Stafford was engaged and it went over until tomorrow.

The litigation is similar to that in the Federal District Court at Philadelphia two years ago, which was halted in the midst of trial. The Baltimore Club claims an actual loss of $300,000 from the disruption of the Federal League and asks the three-fold penalty of the Sherman law. Whether baseball is "commerce" within the scope of the Sherman law is one of the principal questions said to be involved.

GOOD-BYE TO STEEL LEAGUE

Haven for Major League Baseball Players Disbands.

The Bethlehem Steel Baseball League, which was the haven of major league baseball players when the "work-or-fight" order went into effect, has disbanded. The league has been in existence two years, and last year it attracted a number of big league players.

Lebanon was particularly well represented, and at one time last season the club had Hornsby, Ruth, Pratt, Jim Shaw, Stanley Coveleski, Sam Agnew, Eddie Murphy, Plitt, Bill Ritter, Joe Schultz, and Mike Mowrey.

Steelton had Eddie Plank, while Bethlehem starred Jeff Tesreau of the Giants, and Fore River had Dutch Leonard and Al Mamaux, while Joe Jackson played with Wilmington.

For a time the major leagues worried because it was feared that the steel league would attract several of the major leaguers this season.

Erasmus to Play Lacrosse.

Preparations are under way for the formation of a formidable lacrosse team at Eramus Hall H. S. Practice has been started and a number of capable aspirants for berths on the team are in the squad. It is planned to play games with Brooklyn high schools and others out of town. Many of last season's football players are trying for the team. The school's two leading swimmers, Clarence Ross and J. Burrill, are also members of the squad. Some of the others trying for the team are: Marvin Rick, Buck Berry, former Manual Training H. S., athlete; Boyce Jenkins, Bob Deegan, Tots Meistrell and Bob Burr.

Strobel Best at Three Cushions.

In the three-cushion carom billiard tournament at Osborne's Academy last night M. Strobel defeated J. Cosgrove by a score of 35 to 33. The contest was closely contested throughout. Strobel made a high run of five, while Cosgrove's best efforts netted him a run of three points.

Athletic Pavilion Destroyed.

MONTREAL, March 24.—Sohmer Park, Montreal's great athletic pavilion, the scene of many important boxing matches and other sporting events, was ruined by fire this afternoon. The structure, which was of steel frame construction, was valued at $75,000.

DODGERS BEGIN TRAINING.

Special to The New York Times.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., March 24.—Jeff Pfeffer, Ollie O'Mara, Tom Griffith, and Eugene Sheridan of the Dodgers arrived at the club's training camp here today, and Manager Wilbert Robinson put his squad, which numbered nineteen athletes, through the first strenuous training session of the season. The players who have not yet arrived are Captain Zack Wheat, Jimmy Hickman, Hy Myers, Larry Kopf, Harry Heitman, and two rookies, Goodbrid and Adams.

With the exception of Kopf, all the men have signed, and are expected to report within a day or two. Manager Robbie from now on will put the players through two workouts a day. The morning session will last about an hour and a half, while the afternoon practice will continue for two hours.

This afternoon the squad was divided and a six-inning scrub game was played, the Cadores defeating the Mamauxs by a count of 4 to 1. Leon Cadore twirled the first three innings for his team, while Al Mamaux went the same number of rounds for his side. Burleigh Grimes, who until a day or two ago was listed as a hold-out, relieved Cadore, while Rube Marquard finished for the other side. Mamaux, who has had four workouts, appears to be in good shape.

MRS. HURD IS DEFEATED.

Special to The New York Times.

Chapman of Greenwich by one up with the aid of a stymie on the thirteenth green, and will meet Miss Fownes in the semi-finals tomorrow.

The final heat resulted in a victory for W. Murphy of the Riverside Skating Club, who had an allowance of fifty yards. He skated his distance in 3:04. N. Shields of the Palace Skating Club, with a handicap of sixty yards, was second, and R. Hearne, Ice Palace Skating Club, with a handicap of thirty-five yards, was third.

YANKS TAKE KINKS FROM RUSTY ARMS

Special to The New York Times.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., March 24.—Miller Huggins' Yankee squad numbered twenty-five tonight at the close of the first day of Spring training here. Six players were still among the missing, but four of these had previously been accounted for, so only Duffy Lewis and Sam Vick were expected to report tonight or tomorrow morning. The four others are Baker, with permission to forego the training trip; Fewster, who has been detained at Baltimore because of his mother's illness; Jones, who still awaits his discharge from the navy, and Dutch Leonard, who is a holdout.

The arrivals here today were: Catcher Truck Hannah and Pitcher Pete Schneider, who came together from California; Roger Peckinpaugh, Elmer Miller, and Walter Pipp. Peck and Pipp arrived too late to get into the afternoon workout, but the others began their limbering up in the second section of Hug's busy day.

The players were put through two workouts of about two hours each under a sun that would delight any manager. The players cut loose at times with an abandon that will be reflected tomorrow in the form of numerous sore muscles. Outside of O'Doul and Halas, who have been engaged in athletic work through the Winter, the Yankees showed marked signs of their long inactivity from baseball. O'Doul has been playing Winter ball on the Pacific Coast and Halas played football and basketball with the Great Lakes naval training teams since the close of the 1918 baseball season. Both were able to throw hard and run fast.

Quinn and O'Doul, Mogridge, and Thormahlen limbered up their pitching arms in batting practice this afternoon, but none except O'Doul did any more than lob the ball up to the plate. After this work was finished, Huggins made up an infield, with Truck Hannah at first base, Pratt at second, Ward at short, and Mooers, the infielder from Richmond, at third. Mooers was inclined to cut loose with throws to first base, and Huggins had to warn him a few times to be more careful with his bread winner until he had put it in shape for such strenuous exercise. The morning workout was little more than a throwing carnival, with batting practice on the side.

Ernie Shore engaged in both practice sessions, though he had not attached his signature to a Yankee contract. Huggins expects to have a conference with the former Red Sox pitcher, either tonight or tomorrow, and there is little chance of his being a holdout very long. The money difference between the Yankees' offer and the player's demand is said to be slight.

Bill Lamar's status, about which there was some mystery, was cleared up today, when Huggins announced that the player had practically agreed to terms and would stay with the team throughout the training trip. It was through a misunderstanding that Lamar came to Jacksonville, as he was not included in the list decided upon by Huggins for work here. Now that he is here he will stay.

The ball park is in fine condition. The infield is of the regular major league style, and the inclosure is so big that the over-the-fence drive is next to impossible

Meadowlarks	4	0	1,000
White Owls	2	2	500
Foxhunters	2	2	500
Squadron A	1	2	333
Rovers	1	3	250
Outcasts	0	1	...

By a score of 11 goals to 7, the Meadowlarks polo team defeated the Foxhunters last night in the indoor tournament at Durland's Riding Academy. In the other half of a double-header the Rovers and the Outcasts battled to a deadlock, each team getting six goals. The Meadowlarks, through their victory, improved their standing at the head of the percentage and shoved the Foxhunters into a tie with the White Owls for second place.

Handicaps caused the downfall of the Foxhunters and enabled the Outcasts to break even with the Rovers. Six goals were conceded to the Meadowlarks, giving them an advantage which the Foxhunters did not threaten. Earl Hopping engineered a number of offensive plays which baffled the Foxhunters and kept the trio on the defensive practically throughout the game. Hopping was the big factor in the Meadowlarks' victory. The leading scorer was W. Loeb, who registered three goals.

The Outcasts received two goals, and by concerted team work managed to hold the Rovers even. M. Goodman did all the scoring for the Outcasts, registering a brace of goals in each period. Behind him the team played consistently, and turned back many attempts at goals for the Rovers. H. Levinsky and R. Grannis scored the six goals for the Rovers.

N. Y. U. NINE TAKES FIELD.

Coach Egan Holds First Outdoor Practice.

New York University's baseball team held its first outdoor practice of the season yesterday afternoon in Ohio Field. Coach Egan put the squad of fifty men through an intensive two-hour drill, which terminated with a snappy infield workout.

Prospects for a good team at the Violet college this year are very bright, and, with a nucleus of six veterans and several stars from last year's crack freshman nine, a representative aggregation is assured. The regulars from last year are Draffen, catcher; Sulzer, pitcher; Klaess, third base; Bromley, right field; Dailey, centre field, and Esquirol, utility man.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., March 24.—The Naval Academy baseball nine has scheduled a game with the Baltimore Club of the International League for April 2, to open the local season. Games will be played here every Wednesday and Saturday until May 31, when the Military Academy will be encountered at West Point should the expected permission of the authorities be obtained.

DOUGHBOYS CHEER BOXERS AT GARDEN

Soldiers of 27th Heartily Approve of Lively Bouts at Fisticuffs.

Professional and amateur boxers from various parts of the country, together with a number of amateur wrestlers, entertained the members of General O'Ryan's 27th Division last night in three parts of the city. In the Bronx, at the Eighth Battery Armory, a delegation of professionals gave of their efforts for the benefit of the returned fighters who broke the Hindenburg line.

At Madison Square Garden another delegation of pugilists exhibited their talents, and at the Twenty-second Regiment Armory amateur boxers and wrestlers competed in lively bouts while the soldiers whooped it up to their hearts' content.

The shows were held under the auspices of the Military and Theatrical Committee of the Mayor's Committee of Welcome to Home-Coming Troops. More than 10,000 soldiers enjoyed the ring contests.

The greatest crowd perhaps was assembled at Madison Square Garden. About 5,000 people, mostly soldiers, with here and there a sprinkling of civilians, sat back and enjoyed a series of exhibitions which have seldom been duplicated before. The old amphitheatre resounded with the applause of the soldiers, and to enliven the proceedings a naval and a military band were on hand with popular jazz music.

The only thing that prevented casualties in the ranks of the ring performers was that the boxers wore gymnasium gloves, referred to in the ring vernacular as "pillows." Even with these extra-sized fist adornments there were bouts in which one or the other of the principals were rocked dizzy, so earnest were the boxers in their efforts. And the soldiers howled with delight.

Smoke Kelly, a big negro boxer, was one of the hardest workers in the Garden ring. Smoke came on for the second bout against Silas Green, a fellow darkey, and at the conclusion of this three-round session Smoke remained right there in the ring waiting for another opponent. He wasn't kept waiting long. Harry Robinson quickly stepped into the ring and the two flayed each other willingly for three sessions.

The veteran negro heavyweight, Joe Jeannette, battled Jim Coffey, and they slammed each other all over the ring until little Johnny Dundee separated them at the end of the third round. Packey and Jimmy O'Gatti, brothers, furnished the curtain raiser. Then came Kelly and his two sessions, and following these encounters came Walter Laurette and Silent Martin. Then Miss Edna Joyce, the navy songbird, sang two popular ditties.

Other bouts brought together Little Jeff of Baltimore and Bobby Doyle, K. O. Joe Daly and Steamboat Bill Walker, Billy Grupp and Buddy Sprague, George Chaney of Baltimore and Johnny Clinton, Harry Wills of New Orleans and Jimmy Monohan, Joe Burman of Chicago and Abe Freidman, Leo Johnson and Maxey Green, Barney Newman and Corona Kid, Happy Howard and Red Allen, Eddie Fitzsimmons and Artie O'Leary, Joe Tiplitz and Billy Kramer, and Kid Dorsey and Harry Condon.

TO AMEND BOXING BILL.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 24.—Senator Leonard W. H. Gibbs of Buffalo, tonight offered the Legislature several amendments to his bill restoring legalized boxing in the State. One amendment would eliminate the provision for two judges to aid the referee in deciding bouts and place the power with the referee entirely. Another change would empower the State Commissioner to appoint four deputies to be paid $25 a day for each day they are actually engaged and providing necessary expenses of traveling and maintenance.

The State would receive 10 per cent. of the gross receipts instead of the original 5 per cent. allowance made in the bill as introduced, and press tickets would be limited to five instead of twenty-five as first provided.

NO ATHLETIC ARISTOCRACY.

Cornell Strongly Opposes Dean McClellan's "Big Seven" Idea.

Cornell has stated its disapproval of Pennsylvania, advocating the formation of a Big Seven among the more prominent colleges to bar competition with the smaller colleges. The Cornell Sun says of the scheme: "For one, Cornell voices very certainly her dislike to the whole proposal. Among the smaller colleges and universities of the East Cornell has found some of the best and cleanest athletic opponents on her schedules.

"In the great majority of cases the smaller colleges are most honest as to the methods than several institutions included in the 'Big Seven' combination. Frankly, the athletic morals of that proposed organization make a rather painful showing when stacked up beside those of seven of Cornell's smaller college opponents.

"Informal agreements between three, or seven or twenty universities and colleges providing for an annual mutual exchange of games in the various sports each year are to be applauded. When these agreements deteriorate into an athletic aristocracy, devoted to constituting those within the magic circle America's 'athletic leaders,' it is time to call a halt. Cornell has never stood for any of this exclusiveness. And Cornell will never have a share in any combination dedicated to keeping out the 'little fellows,' who very frequently demonstrate a lesson or two of the 'big fellows.'

"The obvious cause for the proposed 'Big Seven,' according to Dean McClellan, is to clean out vicious policies and methods from intercollegiate affairs. Sad as it may seem, every evil charged against the worst small college violator of the fair and square rules of the game may also be checked up against some of the larger institutions."

May Put In Cotton Colors.

Quite a little interest has been aroused by the inclusion of wool colors in the Textile Color Card. It was stated yesterday at the office of the association handling the card that cotton colors may also be listed in the future. The work entailed, however, in getting the heads of the cotton industry together for the purpose will not make this development one of the near future. The Fall card has been out for ten days and has received favorable comment on all sides.

Silk Men to Meet.

The annual meeting of the Silk Association of America will be held in the association rooms tomorrow. While nothing was said of the business to come before the meeting, it is understood that the members will be quite interested in the account of the visit of the Japanese committee. The latter, here to study silk conditions of manufacture with a view to improving their own products, were entertained last night at the Century Roof and today will visit Scranton and Wilkesbarre. Following this they will go to Allentown and perhaps Shamokin.

Openings Emphasize Fancy Note.

The recent openings of men's-wear fabrics lend emphasis to the fact that the materials to be used in Fall suits and overcoats will be especially fancy. According to the trend of retail sentiment, anything in the novelty line will find a ready sale, and the manufacturers have been quick to pick up anything approaching a fancy. As a woolen representative said yesterday: "They have taken everything we have of a fancy nature and are crying for more." The Fall lines, consequently, are showing particularly bright colors and patterns.

Satin Seems Out Of It.

It is a noticeable feature in local millinery circles that moiré and taffeta have replaced satin in the higher-priced hats. Moiré is used for the crowns, upper facings, and lower facings. Taffeta is used for the same purposes. The latter fabric, however, is often used to make an entire hat, while the former has so far been used in conjunction with some other material. Changeable taffeta models are shown in many pretty effects and colorings. Entire crowns made of changeable taffeta in soft shades are seen with facings or flanges to correspond. Quite a few of the models with taffeta tops have tagal facings.

Wool Suitings Opened.

The American Woolen Company yesterday announced prices for the Fall season on a number of lines of wool suitings. The mills and the price ranges on their product are as follows: Saranac, $1.25 to $1.50; Arms, $1.05 to $1.12½; Pioneer, $1.35 to $1.97½; Anderson, $1.37½ to $1.42½; Indian Spring, $1 to $1.60; Chase, $2.42½ to $3.02½; Newport, $1.71½ to $1.62½; Oakland, $1.55 to $1.72½, and Lebanon, $1.90 to $2.17½. Hecla, three-quarter goods, were opened at from 51½ cents to 81 cents. In the market the prices named were considered low and the buying was reported as very brisk.

Burlaps Still Very Quiet.

The lull in the demand for burlaps in this market is still in evidence, and prices continue to ease off from day to day. Eight-ounce "forties" are now held at 6@6¼ cents, while 10½-ounce goods of the same width are quoted at 8@8¼ cents. In both cases the higher quotations are regarded as more or less nominal. Little news of interest is coming from the foreign markets. Dundee is considerably higher than the local market, while cable service between this city and Calcutta is so poor that it detracts from the interest of doing business. It is said now to take from ten to fifteen days to get a message through.

Gray Goods Demand Light.

There was little call for gray goods in this market yesterday, for which three things were held responsible—the nearness of a holiday, the break in cotton, and selling by second hands at prices under those which the mills would accept. In fact, most of the goods sold came from these sources. The sales included 39-inch 68-72s at 11 cents, 39-inch 72-76s at 13 cents, and 38½-inch 64-60s at 9⅓ cents, all for April delivery. Sheetings experienced little demand, though five-yard goods were disposed of at 9¼ cents. Fine-yarn goods had a quiet day of it, but there was a fair movement of the clothing specialties.

Silk Shirts Much in Demand.

The current season is producing the heaviest business in silk shirts for men that the trade has ever seen. The call for the better grades of these shirts is especially heavy, in spite of the prices at which they are held. In crepe and silk jersey shirts a big business is being done, about 99 per cent. of the demand being for stripes of a novelty order. The prices range from $75 to $144 a dozen, wholesale, with the bulk of the call being for the goods priced up to $108 a dozen. About the only flaw in the situation is the slowness of production, due both to the scarcity of labor and the retarded deliveries of the piece goods by the silk mills. Some orders, it is said, are being filled one piece at a time by the mills.

May Increase Use of Imitations.

There is some speculation in the local trade as to just what effect the 10 per cent. luxury tax on furs will have on increasing the demand for imitations of the various pelts. While the furriers are loth to admit that their business will suffer to any extent because of the tax, there is a feeling among pile fabric manufacturers who go in for imitation fur effects that an unusually good season for them is in prospect as a result of it. It is pointed out that some remarkable strides in the production of the goods in question have been made, and predictions are that they will replace furs to no little extent among the consumers who cannot afford to have the tax passed on to them.

Says English Needles Are Coming.

W. & J. Sloane announced yesterday that Fall prices would be named on all lines on April 1. It was stated at the office of the concern that the purpose of the early opening, and it is the earliest on record, was to get prices out to the trade, make them as favorable as possible and thereby help to stabilize trade conditions. Alexander Smith & Sons have also announced an auction sale of 40,000 bales of Axminster, velvet and tapestry rugs and carpetings for the same date. It was stated that production has been on a 25 per cent. basis and less for some time, and that some of the offerings of the auction still are on the looms.

Floor Covering Offers.

The local representative of a well-known English manufacturer of needles, machine needles, cutlery, etc., has taken issue with a recent statement in The Times to the effect that no English-made needles are coming to this market and that they are being replaced by domestic needles. "There is no such thing as a domestic-made hand sewing needle," he said yesterday. "All of the best-grade goods are imported, as they always have been, from England, and the manufacturers in that country are supplying the quantity that they have been all during the war. It will be some time before the quantity reaches the pre-war output, but England is the only source of supply at the present time except Japan, which supplies the cheaper grade of needles." As to prices, it was said that they had been reduced in cases where profiteering had been going on, but that they might never get back to pre-war bases.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

The reactionary trend of stocks yesterday could be ascribed to a number of influences, not the least of which was probably the structure of the market itself. The steel stocks, as on Saturday, moved backward gradually from the opening to the end of the session, undoing some of the abrupt gains which succeeded the establishment of steel products' quotations. The tendency toward lower levels was more pronounced among the petroleum and automobile shares, but among all of the issues which receded the aspects of trading were much similar and denoted that the softening process noticeable last week, prior to Thursday's developments at Washington, had again appeared. Among the more active stocks declines ran from 1 to more than 3 points.

Outside of several issues which were advanced because of special considerations, the market last week up to Thursday afternoon seemed ready for reaction. This situation contained conventional elements, for a fairly prolonged advance had up to that time been accompanied by no material setbacks. The stimulation of the steel stocks apparently changed temporarily the market's underlying tone, but yesterday it looked as though the factors which shape a reverse movement after an advance had renewed their influence. At the same time there were events in the day's news of a character to promote profit taking and short sales and the comment of bank and brokerage office showed a closer attention to foreign occurrences than in several weeks. The quick alteration of the political horizon in Hungary and indications supplied in dispatches from Paris that the treaty of peace could not be completed as soon as was lately predicted were the subjects of study in the financial district. Another day of confused movements of sterling and franc exchange also directed more attention to the uncertainties of international trade and financial developments for some time to come. Sterling cables were quoted from 4.65 down to 4.63 toward the close, somewhat lower than at the end of Saturday's business. Paris remittances were lower and Italian exchange also moved off after the second cut in the official quotations was announced. On the side of favorable items stood a distinct improvement in the copper market, with reports of larger buying than had been witnessed in a month or more. Purchases began early last week, denoting, in the opinion of producers, that manufacturers had decided that at 15 cents a pound the metal was low enough to warrant the placing of orders to cover part of requirements some months hence. The fact that the quotation had stood rather firmly at 15 cents for a month may have induced "scale" buying by consumers who consider the market in a position warranting a gradual advance. As far as copper stocks were concerned the improvement in the metal market was offset by the reduction of the Anaconda Copper Mining Company's quarterly dividend, the second contraction to occur in less than a half year. This action was based upon the same considerations which have brought many dividend cuts since the armistice was signed, the chief of them being the presence of heavy unsold supplies in the hands of most companies.

Liberty bonds again shaded off, the fourth 4¼s touching a new low record. The general bond market continued quiet. Call money moved over a range extending from 5½ to 4 per cent., the bulk of the day's accommodation being placed at 5 per cent.

LONDON, March 24. (Associated Press.)—The pound sterling was worth only $4.62 at the close of trading today on the Stock Exchange. This was the best offer which traders wishing to remit funds to New York could get.

Earlier in the day business cable transfers were done at a few cents higher, but the rate seemed more settled at the lower level.

Heavy Trading on Paris Bourse.

PARIS, March 24.—There was heavy trading on the Bourse today. Three per cent rentes were quoted at 63 francs, exchange on London at 27 francs 2 centimes, and the 5 per cent Loan at 88 francs 75 centimes.

To Discuss Merchant Marine.

A number of business men will address the sixth National Foreign Trade Convention, which will be held at Chicago next month. One of the chief topics which will come before the convention will be a discussion of the future American merchant marine. Among those who will attend the convention are Eugene Meyer, Jr., Managing Director of the War Finance Corporation, who will speak on "Financing Our Excess Exports"; William S. Culbertson of the United States Tariff Commission; Homer L. Ferguson, Frederick J. Koster, and James A. Farrell.

The great narrator of war, Philip Gibbs, will begin in The New York Times next Sunday a description of what took place "Behind the Scenes." Order today.—Advt.

The Inspiration Dividend.

In view of the cut which was announced yesterday in the quarterly dividend of the Anaconda Copper Mining Company, from $1.50 to $1, there was aroused renewed speculation as to what would be the course of action when the Directors of the Inspiration Copper Company meet to take dividend action. The Inspiration dividend remains on the basis of $8 a year. When the first cut was made in the Anaconda dividend, three months ago, the Inspiration Directors failed to follow suit. This was considered rather remarkable, in view of the fact that the company is closely allied with Anaconda and has a number of Anaconda Directors on its board. When spoken to concerning the dissimilar actions, one of the Directors of both Anaconda and Inspiration said that the cash position of Inspiration was decidedly strong and that it could afford to maintain its dividend rate. That, of course, was for the dividend then under consideration, and whether a similar condition will hold true in regard to the forthcoming dividend caused much debate yesterday. The Anaconda dividend is now on a four-dollar-a-year basis, or only half of what it was six months ago. If Inspiration cuts its dividend, Anaconda will suffer an income reduction, for it holds nearly 300,000 shares of Inspiration stock.

A Comparison of Steel Prices.

Whether the steel price reductions decided upon between the Industrial Board of the Department of Commerce and representatives of the steel manufacturers of the country are drastic depends on whether they are viewed from the standpoint of the manufacturers or the consumers. An average of eight representative products, Bessemer pig iron, Bessemer billets, Bessemer rails, bars, structural shapes, plates, wire nails, and tin plate, shows a price of $63.49 a gross ton under the minimum price scale determined upon at Washington a few days ago. This average is higher than for any year since 1917, when the price for the eight products was $91.01. Taking 1913 as a representative pre-war year, the average price was $36.49. The highest average recorded between 1901 and 1916 was $40.63 in 1907.

Few Stocks Advance.

Yesterday's reactionary market found few stocks that were inclined to higher levels, and fewer still that showed gains of more than a point. One in the latter class was United States Realty and Improvement, an advance of 1¾ being recorded on the day's transactions. Although the construction companies are not in the least optimistic over the reduction in steel prices, the belief persists, apparently, among the trading community that a building boom must necessarily follow within a short time. It is probably because of this that the Realty and Improvement shares went contrawise to the market tendency of yesterday.

How About Steel Guarantees?

Ever since the steel men came back from Washington, following their conference with the Industrial Board as to a stabilization of steel prices, there has apparently been a reluctance to give any details of the meeting. It was the supposition that in return for the agreement of co-operation and a price reduction the steel men were to get guarantees that the Government would place orders for steel for the railroads, the Emergency Fleet Corporation, and the navy, and in this way establish confidence in the price levels. It seems incredible that the steel representatives made all of the concessions without obtaining any in return. Thus far there has not been the least disposition on the part of either the steel men or the Government to talk about Government orders.

Irregular Exchanges.

In yesterday's dealings, sterling exchange did much better, relatively speaking, than francs. The latter fell to the previous low of the movement, around 5.80, while sterling stood well above the low scored early Saturday, when the pound sold at $4.56. Italian exchange, of course, was weak, and in seeking its level there were quotations as low as 7.75 for cables. In all the exchanges, it has been notable that the degree of trouble experienced in this latest process of readjustment has been greatest where the most heroic efforts were required to stabilize. Italian, held mainly by official rule, has had the most unhappy time of all since the removal of restrictions. Sterling, held mainly by the creation of credits here for the purchase of the bills ordered, has behaved most conventionally.

Nothing new developed in the local traction situation, so far as Wall Street is concerned, yesterday. The several committees formed to look after the interests of the various security issues of the New York Railways and Interborough Consolidated declared they were merely watchfully waiting and no new committees, either formed or in process of formation, were reported. Now that the Railways and the Consolidated companies have gone under, naturally a good deal of attention centres around the Interborough Rapid Transit, more particularly around the refunding 5s., which have an interest due date on July 1. Unofficially, it has been said time and again that this coupon would be paid, and there was nothing in the latest balance sheet published to indicate that it would not. Bankers are looking into this matter and if their investigation appears to warrant it, some sort of organized safeguarding action may be taken. But the possibility of this, it is believed, is more or less remote.

Cunard Line Expanding.

Local shipping circles were inclined yesterday to attach special significance to dispatches received from London which stated that the Cunard Line was distributing to ordinary shareholders a 100 per cent. bonus by capitalizing about £1,500,000 of its reserve fund. The company's dividend for 1918 was 20 per cent., and there are those in the financial district who are inclined to believe that the company has declared the bonus as a preliminary step toward a further expansion which may involve other shipping concerns.

Prompt Action.

The announcement from Washington that the War Finance Corporation will take care of railroad financing until April 1 and beyond that date, through the medium of certificates issued by the Railroad Administration, was met with general approval in the financial district yesterday. Since Director General of Railroads Walker D. Hines made the suggestion that the financing of the roads through the emergency period might be effected in this manner, bankers and railroad men have agreed that the plan was logical, but at the same time there has been a good deal of uncertainty as to just how acceptable due bills issued by the Railroad Administration would be. The action of the War Finance Corporation which has accepted the Railroad Administration's paper, was interpreted yesterday to mean that the prevailing uncertainty surrounding the certificates has been set aside, and the Administration's due bills—the certificates are such—will be accepted as bona fide Government obligations.

More Extra Session Talk.

The financial district continues to hear persistent talk about the probability of an early special session of Congress. Many of the rumors which circulated through brokerage offices and among the banks yesterday even specified the time as May 1, but in conservative quarters this was considered as highly improbable. Railroad men and bankers who have just returned from Washington say that, while the capital is filled with a multiplicity of rumors and reports regarding the special session of Congress, no definite information can be obtained, other than that which indicates that the President will not call Congress together until June, as he intimated before sailing for France.

A number of Directors' meetings scheduled for today in Wall Street were postponed because of the parade, and several of the New York branches of foreign banking institutions decided to close their doors. In addition to these a large number of the private banking houses in the financial district have declared a holiday, and many of the trust companies and national and savings banks will release as many of their employes as they can.

ANACONDA DIVIDEND CUT.

The Directors of the Anaconda Copper Mining Company yesterday reduced the quarterly dividend from $1.50 to $1 a share, thus placing the stock on a $4 annual basis. Up to three months ago the stock was paying $8 a year. At that time a cut of 50 cents was made in the quarterly disbursement. The reduction came as something of a surprise to the trading community, for the sales of copper have been heavy during the last week or ten days. In view of this it was anticipated that the dividend rate on the $6 basis might be maintained. The copper stocks had been firm up to the time of the announced cut in the dividend, but immediately thereafter became heavy.

No official announcement was made after the meeting as to why the dividend had been reduced. It is believed, however, that the company deemed it better to follow a conservative policy in disbursements, owing to the uncertainty which still prevails as to the demand for copper.

Will Resume Trading in Copper.

The New York Metal Exchange is preparing to resume trading in copper within a short time. The copper dealt in will be electrolytic, lake, and casting. Special rules to govern the trading have been drawn up and a new form of copper contract has been prepared.

MACKAY WILL FIGHT REMOVAL, HE SAYS

Announces in Statement That He Will Combat Burleson "to the Last Ditch."

DENIES DISOBEYING ORDERS

Telegraph President Calls Postmaster General Arbitrary, Despotic, Vindictive.

Clarence H. Mackay, President of the Mackay Companies, the holding corporation of the Postal Telegraph-Cable Company, issued a statement last night dealing with his removal by Postmaster General Burleson, in which he stated that he would fight Mr. Burleson "to my last dollar and to the last ditch." Mr. Mackay termed the methods of the Postmaster General "government by bureaucrats," his statement reading:

"On my return to New York after absence over the week-end I learned the facts in regard to the call last Saturday of Postmaster General Burleson's representatives at the executive offices of the Postal Telegraph-Cable Company, of which I am still President. It appears that on Saturday noon, just at the close of business hours, and after I left town on a visit to my daughter in Baltimore, without previous notification of any kind, Mr. Bethell of the Bell Telephone Company, Mr. Bracelen, an attorney of the Bell Telephone Company, and Mr. Adams of the Kansas City Telephone Company called. On learning from my Secretary that I had gone out of town, they served the order of Postmaster General Burleson dismissing me and other officials from the operations of the lines of the Postal Telegraph-Cable Company. I leave it to the judgment and fair play of the American public as to what it thinks of the company's competitors being given power by the Postmaster General to call at our offices and demand control of our property and without the slightest intimation of their intended visit. It would seem incredible if it had not actually occurred, and is the latest and greatest example of Government by bureaucrats.

"This act of Postmaster General Burleson is only the continuance of a deliberate conspiracy to wreck and ruin the Postal Telegraph system and then establish a monopoly of wire communication in the United States. The public will recall the rosy promises that were made after the telegraph and telephone lines were taken over on Aug. 1, 1918, as to what would be the outcome of this Government control—that the magic wand of Postmaster General Burleson and his assistants would establish the millennium of perpetual happiness for the telegraph and telephone user by reducing rates and improving the service.

Calls Vail Burleson's Mentor.

"The result of eight months of operation for "the national security and defense" has been the raising of long-distance telephone rates all over the United States at the suggestion of Mr. Vail, who is Mr. Burleson's mentor, the proposition to raise telegraph rates in the interest of the Western Union Telegraph Company, the disturbance of the morale of our organization, and the general deterioration of the entire telegraph and telephone service. Mr. Burleson now finds that he is facing a deficit as the result of his operation of the Western Union Telegraph Company, and in order to make up that deficit to the Western Union he is endeavoring to confiscate the earnings of the Postal Telegraph-Cable Company.

"Mr. Burleson tries to justify his action of the day before yesterday by saying we did not obey his instructions. I know of only two matters which could possibly be distorted into justifying Mr. Burleson's assertion. One is the question of the wage schedules, which, owing to the ambiguity of the announcement by the Post Office Department, caused much delay in applying it to our system and which delay was understood by Mr. Bethell, Mr. Burleson's representative. Mr. Bethell told me that if our system of organization was not the same as the Western Union's to go ahead and to do the best we could, and we did that by announcing a 10 per cent. increase wage schedule on March 5, retroactive from Jan. 1, 1919.

"The other matter which Mr. Burleson ordered was the increase in long distance telephone rates on our long distance telephone lines, which we operate in the South and Southwest and on the Pacific Coast.

"As the public knows, complaints from all over the country as to the rise in telephone rates brought action by the Public Utility Commissions, and in a number of instances I believe the matter was taken to the courts, and now the Kansas Commission has brought suit in the Supreme Court of the United States. We were consequently placed in a dilemma, for if we acceded to Mr. Burleson's order to increase the rates we faced heavy fines and penalities in various of the States, and I utterly fail to see how any one could expect us under these circumstances to run such a risk without first making sure of our ground. Thus it will be seen that Mr. Burleson's talk of our refusing to follow out his instructions is mere pretense.

Aimed to Speed Up Service.

"We have endeavored to maintain our usual high-class telegraph service under the most difficult circumstances, due to the deterioration of the morale under Mr. Burleson's control, and if any evidence is needed of this, it is only a fortnight ago that we sent out our Chief Operating Manager on a tour of inspection, with orders to speed up the service as much as possible.

"The lines were turned over to Mr. Burleson for 'the national security or defense,' and purely as a war measure. The principal acts of Mr. Burleson since he took control have been the increasing of long-distance telephone rates in the interest of the Bell Telephone Company, the proposition to increase telegraph rates in the interest of the Western Union Telegraph Company, the seizure of the cables after the signing of the armistice, the ousting of myself and other officials from the Commercial Cable and Postal Telegraph-Cable Companies, and the order that the Postal Company should build no lines to compete with the Bell Telephone and Western Union without first submitting our plans to officials of those companies.

"How can Mr. Burleson justify any of the above acts as being for 'the national security or defense?'

Says Burleson Is Vindictive.

"Mr. Burleson turned over our cable system to Mr. Carlton, President of the Western Union, our competitor, and Mr. Carlton ordered me to have nothing more to do with our own cable system. Mr. Burleson has now turned over the entire land line system to a telephone man and ordered me to have nothing to do with that land line system. The Kaiser himself could not have been more arbitrary, despotic and vindictive.

"However, I wish to serve public notice on Postmaster General Burleson that for those things which are un-American, for the taking advantage of the public under the pretense of a war measure, for his turning over the operation of our properties to our competitors, and for his despotic and brutal methods, I will fight him to my last dollar and to the last ditch."

Arthur F. Adams, President of the Kansas City Home Telephone Company, appointed by the Postmaster General to supervise the Postal properties, discussed his plans of administration thus:

"My plans are to protect and maintain the property, the organization, the business, and the service to the public of this concern. I shall also see that the orders and policies of the Postmaster General are carried out in the operation of the property. Any controversy between the corporation and the Government over compensation or other matters interjected into it, are matters that don't concern me. I am only interested in matters pertaining to the operation of the property."

Mr. Adams, whose offices are at 195 Broadway, the American Telephone & Telegraph Building, said that he planned to retain all employes and officials now in the Postal service. Charles P. Bruch, Vice President of the Postal, and twenty-seven years in its service, has been appointed General Manager of the wire company by Mr. Burleson.

COTTON GOES SMASHING.

News from Abroad Sends Prices Down from 80 to 130 Points.

Reports of the new Hungarian uprising, and the belief that the elimination of support of sterling and French exchange would lead to a serious reduction in cotton shipments, sent yesterday's cotton market smashing down. This market, which was bounding ahead last week in the cheerful belief that all was lovely and that peace and good times would soon be restored, turned completely around yesterday and for every bull of last week, there seemed to be two bears yesterday. The fact that today the Cotton Exchange will be closed may have had something to do with the liquidation—undoubtedly did, in fact, for the trade interests here in New York were frankly worried and outsiders seemed to be more less apprehensive and there was a general desire to get out.

There may be some significance, furthermore, in the fact that the cotton market, as it exists at the moment, and as he stock market also exists, is a much truer international market than is the stock market. Liverpool, in other words, takes a much more active interest in our cotton market than London does in our securities. In yesterday's session Liverpool sold heavily, which made local interests more fearful than they ordinarily would have been over the Hungarian affair. It was argued here that if Liveroop was so alarmed, the situation must indeed be bad.

The selling continued throughout practically the whole five hours. At the close prices were down 80 to 130 points. Spot cotton at New York was 85 points lower.

WESTERN UNION HAS $10,466,997 INCOME

Gets $3,327,112 Rental for First Five Months Under Government Control.

AFFECTED BY WAR PRICES

Reports $9,599,059 Spent in Property and Wage Increase of 25 Per Cent.

The annual report of the Western Union Telegraph Company for 1918 shows a balance available for dividends of $10,466,907, as compared with a balance of $11,715,366 in the preceding year. The income account shows the division between private operation of the lines and the Government operation. During the seven months ended July 31, when the company was still under private control, the gross operating revenue was $54,283,410, and the operating expenses amounted to $46,604,926. The operating revenue for the full year of 1917 was $76,995,511 and the expenses $62,783,006.

The income of the company last year was added to by the Government compensation, which amounted to $3,327,112, this applying to the land lines only, from Aug. 1 to Dec. 31. The surplus of the company at the close of last year was $32,518,993, as compared with $29,248,410 at the end of 1917.

Operating expenses..	*46,604,926	62,783,006
Govt. compensation..	3,327,112
Other income.........	1,391,128	1,484,711
Interest	*776,912	1,331,850
Depreciation	1,152,816	2,650,000
Balance	10,466,997	11,715,366

*Seven months ended July 31.

Newcomb Carlton, President of the company, in his statement to the stockholders, calls attention to the increased cost of operation, due in part to increases in salary, special war payments, and the necessary increase in the number of employes due to extraordinary labor conditions. The total increase in wages for land line and cable employes amounted to about $10,600,000, or 25 per cent.

Additions and betterments to property account during the year amounted to $9,599,059, a sum much in excess of previous years, because of the large amount of construction work in progress on Dec. 31, the higher costs of materials and labor, and the expenditure during the year of $1,206,285 in the partial construction of the new building in Chicago.

"In the year 1918," the report says, "Government land lines and cable traffic was handled by the company at $5,800,000 below actual cost of operation. Government land rates represent about 41 per cent. of the commercial rates, hence if the United States Government had been charged with regular commercial rates $7,500,000 more would have been paid for telegraph service furnished by this company.

"In addition to the above, the Government cable business, including that of the United States, Great Britain, and Canada, is carried at half rates. The total difference of about $9,000,000 between commercial and Government land line and cable tolls is an additional financial contribution by the company in 1918 toward the cost of the war."

The Best Way to Repay a Mortgage.

THE best and safest way to assure repayment of a mortgage is to require that it be amortized or reduced by annual partial payments of principal, in order to take care of depreciation of the property. The old-fashioned loan, maturing all in one sum, is an obviously imperfect investment.

Every issue of first mortgage bonds, safeguarded under the Straus Plan, is an amortized loan, about 5% of the principal being paid off each year out of the earnings of the mortgaged property. Maturities, 2 to 10 years. Net yield, 6%. Denominations, $1,000, $500 and $100. Write for literature, and ask for

DEFENDS HIS RIGHT TO NAME WILLIAMS

MEETS McFADDEN REQUEST

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—Secretary Glass of the Treasury has replied in a letter to the demands of Representative McFadden of Pennsylvania that the Secretary furnish his legal authority for appointing John Skelton Williams Controller of the Currency after the Senate had failed to confirm the renomination of Mr. Williams. The Secretary asserts that his action was based upon an act of Congress passed in 1895 and construed by the then Attorney General Moody as providing for interim appointments of Treasury Department officers.

Mr. Glass's letter to Mr. McFadden, which was written March 18, is the latest step in the controversy begun by the Pennsylvania Congressman over Mr. Williams's appointment. Mr. McFadden has made a fight against the renomination, holding that Mr. Williams was continued in his place illegally. One of the letters written by Mr. McFadden to Secretary Glass was returned by the Cabinet officer with the statement that Mr. Glass did not wish the document in his files because it was considered "insulting." In the letter of March 18, which was given out this afternoon at the Treasury Department, Secretary Glass writes to Mr. McFadden, that the Secretary is "pleased to observe the omission from your second letter of the surprisingly offensive implications and accusations which appeared in the letter of March 14, which I felt obliged to return to you."

Text of the Secretary's Letter.

The letter written by Secretary Glass to Mr. McFadden follows:

"Washington, March 18, 1919.

"Dear Sir: I have your letter of March 17, concerning the designation by me of Mr. John Skelton Williams to administer the office of Comptroller of the Currency pending the appointment by the President and confirmation by the Senate of his successor and am pleased to observe the omission from your second letter of the surprisingly offensive implications and accusations which appeared in the letter of March 14, which I felt obliged to return to you.

"I note now that you desire to know by what authority the Secretary of the Treasury has given John Skelton Williams a recess appointment as Comptroller of the Currency, following the failure of the President to make such appointment. The simple facts are that the term of the Comptroller of the Currency having expired and a contest over his confirmation for a second term having developed, the Secretary of the Treasury, in order that the activities of the office might not be suspended, designated Mr. Williams 'to continue to administer the office of Comptroller of the Currency at the salary provided by law, until the Senate shall have acted upon your renomination by the President or until your successor shall have been appointed and confirmed.'

"This action by the Secretary was based on an act of Congress passed March 2, 1895, which says: 'That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby authorized and directed, to pay to all officers under the Treasury Department whose terms of office have expired or shall expire before the appointment and qualification of their successors, and who have been performing or shall perform the duties of their respective offices after the date of such expiration, the salary, compensation, fees or emoluments authorized or provided by law in each case for the respective incumbents of the offices.'

"An interpretation of this statute is contained in an opinion of Attorney General William Henry Moody, dated June 27, 1916, in which it was held that: 'Congress has expressly provided in the act of March 2, 1895, (28 Stat. 808, 844) for the continuance in office of all officers under the Treasury Department after the date of the expiration of their terms of office and before the appointment and qualification of their successors, and also for the waiving of the requirements of a new bond during that period in the discretion of the officers whose duty it is to take and approve such bonds.'

Obtained Specific Rulings.

"Furthermore, to be sure that I had full legal sanction of my action, I submitted the matter to Judge W. W. Warwick, Controller of the Treasury, who advised me that my designation of Mr. Williams to administer the office of Controller of the Currency 'is in accord with law, and I am of the opinion that you may permit him to exercise the duties of the office, and that he will be entitled to receive the salary thereof, unless the President otherwise directs.'

"The right of Mr. Williams to act as an ex-officio member of the Federal Reserve Board is sustained in an opinion rendered by M... Elliott, General Counsel of the board, on Feb. 3, 1919, who, after quoting the statutes and the opinion of Attorney General Moody, says: 'Under this opinion of the Attorney General, the Controller may continue in office after the expiration of his term and until his successor is appointed. So long as he continues in office as Controller and receives compensation as such from the Treasury Department he remains ex officio a member of the Federal Reserve Board, and, in the opinion of this office, is clearly entitled to receive that part of his salary which is paid by the board.'

"Therefore, with these legal opinions as a basis for action, the Secretary of the Treasury feels thoroughly well satisfied that he has exercised an unquestionable legal authority in designating Mr. Williams to continue in the office of Controller of the Currency until the appointment and qualification of his successor. Yours very truly,

"CARTER GLASS.

"The Hon. L. T. McFadden, House Office Building, Washington, D. C."

It was said at the Capitol this afternoon that Representative McFadden had gone to his home in Canton, Penn.

COPPER MARKET ACTIVE.

Greatly increased activity has been shown in the copper market during the last seven to ten days. It is estimated that the total sales of the metal in that time have been 175,000,000 pounds. The increase in business is said to have been brought about by a realization among consumers that the price of copper could not go below its present level. Most of the copper was sold at 15 cents a pound, a price which has obtained for a number of weeks. Since the signing of the armistice the market has been inactive with only a little buying on the part of those who were in urgent need of the metal.

A representative of one of the largest copper companies said yesterday that the consumers of copper had apparently come to a realization that copper might go higher in price. He attributed the rush of orders in part to the stabilization of steel prices by the Industrial Board of the Department of Commerce. This was reflected to the copper market, the consumers according to his version apparently believing that a stabilization of copper prices might be determined upon shortly. It was pointed out that the copper companies were not paying the miners on the basis of 18 cent copper; they were actually receiving only 15 cents for metal.

COMMODITY RATES CUT.

Reductions Affect Machinery for Export Over the Pacific.

The reductions are specific, and are said to hange between 15 and 75 per cent.

The new rates, which will be put into effect as soon as the tariffs can be prepared and filed, are as follows for the more important commodities, per 100 pounds: Agricultural implements, $1; iron articles, 60 cents; machinery, $1; railway equipment, 75 cents; passenger automobiles, $3.75; freight automobiles, $3; canned goods, $1; pig iron, 55 cents; paper, 90 cents; plumbers' goods, $1.50; zinc plates and sheets, 80 cents, and vehicles, $1.40.

SEES FOOD PRICES COMING DOWN SOON

SAYS WHEAT WILL LEAD OFF

Asserts Hoover's Statement on $3.50 Wheat Was Misunderstood and That Public Will Get It Cheaper.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—Cheaper food in the near future was predicted today by Chairman Peek of the Department of Commerce Industrial Board, as a result of a conference with Food Administrtion officials in New York.

Mr. Peek said there had been a general misunderstanding of a recent statement by Mr. Hoover that wheat might go to $3.50 a bushel, and added that the billion dollar grain appropriation was made by Congress to enable the public to get wheat products at reasonable prices, as well as to make good the guarantee to the producer. With wheat prices reasonable, Mr. Peek said, reasonable prices of other products could be expected, because wheat was the barometer of the food trade.

Mr. Peek and William M. Ritter, a member of the board, returned from New York this morning, where they went to obtain from officials of the Food Administration and its grain corporation a statement of their policy on food prices. Upon his return here Mr. Peek made this statement:

"Food Administration officials felt that it was unfortunate that there had been such general misunderstanding of Mr. Hoover's statement that 'we might see wheat at $3.50 a bushel.'

"What Mr. Hoover said was: 'We might see wheat at $3.50 a bushel, as it was in the Spring of 1917, if there is a free market in wheat and uncontrolled prices. So much for the 1918 crop. There can be no free market of 90 per cent. of the world's exports. As to the 1919 crop, it is, of course, too early to come to any precise conclusion.'

"It is clear that, as Mr. Hoover says, 'there can be no free market' at present, in the first place, because of the unsettled conditions in business—especially in shipping and finance.

"Further, the phrasing of the Grain Appropriation bill clearly indicates that the $1,000,000,000 appropriation was made by Congress, not only to make good the $2.26 guarantee to the farmers, but to enable the Government to sell wheat and flour at the guaranteed prices, 'or at such other prices and on such terms or conditions as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of the act,' and to enable the people of the United States to purchase wheat products at reasonable cost. Wheat is the basic food commodity. What is a reasonable cost must be determined by conditions. In July the new wheat crop, estimated at more than a billion and a quarter bushels, will begin to come to market.

"I believe, therefore, that there is every reason to expect lower food prices in the relatively near future. This view, I believe, the men in charge of the affairs of the Food Administration will share."

The prediction of Mr. Peek that prices of foodstuffs will come down in the near future will be welcome news to the housewives, in view of the fact that prices have steadily advanced during the last six weeks to almost war-time records. Discussing the recent increase in prices, Commissioner of Public Markets Day said yesterday that this was doubtless brought about largely on account of the heavy shipments of foodstuffs to Europe.

No intimation has been given as to what the distributer expects to charge the consumer, but it is expected that the reduction to the consumer will be about 2 cents a quart. Under the proposal, the distributers would take all the milk produced by the dairymen.

The New York Federal Food Board, which virtually ceased to function soon after the armistice was signed, gave up its offices yesterday at 6 West Fifty-seventh Street.

Judge Mayer Holds That Finances Should Not Be Disturbed.

Federal Judge Mayer has decided that it would be unwise at this time for Lindley M. Garrison, as receiver of the B. R. T. Company, to institute suit for the recovery of bonds deposited by the company as collateral with banking concerns, on the ground that the alleged legal requirement that the price at which the bonds could be sold in case of default had not been complied with. Mr. Garrison had pointed out the law as he had interpreted it and asked the court for instructions. About $29,000,000 of bonds were involved in the matter, and, according to counsel for the banking concerns, a decision favoring a suit would affect hundreds of millions of securities held as collateral for money loaned.

Judge Mayer, in his opinion, said the financial conditions should remain as stable as possible and should not be disturbed by any question as to the validity of transactions which were honorable and honest, and which were concerned with the operation of a large public utility company.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

There was a heavy tone to the market yesterday on the Consolidated Stock Exchange. Realization sales made for reactions in all the active issues. The list, lacking demand, responded to the selling movement. In the afternoon there was a more stabilized situation and price changes were of minor importance. Trading activity, after midday, was greatly restricted in volume. Speculative interest was centred in the industrials.

WATCH JAPAN'S AIM IN LOAN TO CHINA

CLAIMS TO IRON DEPOSITS

Belief That Peace Conference Will Arrange for the Future of Oriental Finance.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—What is regarded as an important new phase of the Chinese-Japanese situation was disclosed today when it became known that Japan was engaged in endeavoring to arrange a new loan to China, in order to secure which Japanese financiers, with the appoval of their Government, were insisting on having as security for the loan the Feng-huang-shan iron mines and a large tract of surrounding country.

The State Department has been advised of every step taken in connection with this proposed loan by its representative in Peking, who, it is understood, is acting in full accord with the British, French, and Italian diplomatic representatives. The Japanese banking group, which was to have been associated with the international banking group, is proceeding to secure as many and as great concessions as possible, according to reports received from authentic sources in Washington, with a view to strengthening Japan's position before the Peace Conference in Paris.

A suggestion that this Japanese group would not be in a position to co-operate with the international group when formed was not supported by officials here. It was said that there had been no indication that the Japanese group contemplated withdrawing from the larger organiztion or would be left out of the latter when it was definitely organized.

It was pointed out that the Japanese bankers cannot afford to antagonize the bankers of America, Great Britain, and France, and it is not believed that any such step would be considered by the present régime in Japan. The military party is known to have been in favor of Japan playing a lone hand in financial affairs in the Far East, but with the coming into power of the present Liberal Government this plan was quickly abandoned.

The allied Governments are relying on the attitude of the Liberal Government of Japan in their efforts to compose the admittedly existing differences between Japan and the other powers. The future of China and the question of peace in the Orient may depend largely upon these efforts.

That the international bankers of Europe and the United States are working in co-operation with the Peace Conference delegates was admitted today. The conclusions finally reached as to China by the Paris conferees will include the determination of banking groups as to the financial affairs of the Orient.

Light is thrown on the Japanese attempts to secure control of the Nanking iron deposits by an authentic report on the situation just received in Washington. It indicates that in addition to General Feng Kuo-Chang and his Mo Ling Company, and the Japanese project to gain control of the deposits, a third factor, the Hsin Feng Company, has interested itself in the matter, and is opposing the aspirations of General Feng and all foreign interests.

The Hsin Feng Company was organized by Tao Pao Chin, a member of the old Parliament, a one-third interest being owned by Chang Chien, ex-Minister of Commerce and Agriculture. The introduction of this new element into the negotiations is declared to add to the complications of the situation.

SOVIET'S RAILWAY PLANS.

Considering Extensive Concessions to a Norwegian Financier.

PARIS, March 24.—The Russian Soviet Government, according to an announcement published in the semi-official Isvestia of Moscow on Feb. 6, a copy of which has been received here, is considering a propositoin to grant large timber concessions in Northern Russia to Eduard Hannevig, a Norwegian citizen, and other promoters on condition that they build railways. The proposed lines would cover several thousand miles.

The proposition was first considered by the Soviet officials on Feb. 4, but they delayed action pending an investigation of the ability of Hannevig to finance the project. The newspaper says that Hannevig has banking connections in London and New York, and proposes to interest allied and neutral firms in furnishing money for the scheme. The timber concession cotemplates the granting of timber rights on more than 15,000,000 acres with permission to cut 50,000 trees annually.

The Soviet commissioners adopted a resolution declaring that they were willing to secognize foreign capital in Russia only when the proposed development could not be carried out by Russians.

BETTER BRITISH OUTLOOK.

Government Said to Have Conceded Most of Railway Men's Demands.

LONDON, March 24.—At the conclusion of an adjourned conference between the railwaymen and the Government at the Board of Trade today the statement was made by J. H. Thomas, General Secretary of the National Union of Railwaymen, that the members of the union had a full interpretation of the Government's offer to the railwaymen, and it was now for the men to decide whether to ratify the offer.

Mr. Thomas said earlier that most of the demands of the railwaymen had been conceded in principle, and from that point of view the negotiations had been a success. The great difference, he added, was not between the Government and the railwaymen, but between the unions concerned.

SELLING METHODS IMPUGNED

LONDON, March 24.—The British Government has no evidence that American commercial representatives are selling goods in Scandinavia without a license, Cecil B. Harmsworth, Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, declared in answer to a question in the House of Commons today.

The Under Secretary said that inquiries would be made if the member could substantiate his allegations with any specific instance.

TO CHANGE LICENSE RULE.

Britain Will Exempt Issues to be Invested in the Empire.

LONDON, March 24.—An order will be issued by the British Government exempting from the requirement of Treasury licenses all issues of securities by companies established in the United Kingdom in cases where the issuing company certifies that no part of the issue is to be applied for capital purposes outside the Kingdom, it was announced in the House of Commons today by J. Austen Chamberlain, the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Issues by British companies for capital purposes abroad, he added, are still subject to control.

NEW STATE POWER POLICY.

Republican Leaders Plan to Remove Some Constitutional Limitations.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 24.—The right of the State to develop its waterpower must be definitely determined before legislation providing for the development, utilization, and distribution of these resources will be introduced in the Legislature, Henry J. Walters, majority leader of the Senate, and Speaker Sweet of the Assembly, announced tonight in a joint statement.

Standing in the way of progress of such legislation at this time are these obstacles:

Pending negotiations between the State and the Federal Governments and the State and the Canadian Governments to determine the State's rights.

The removal of the State's constitutional prohibitions against use of the forest preserves, interference with stream-flow regulations, cutting of timber, and the construction on the preserves of power plants and transmission lines.

The necessity of a constitutional amendment to declare power a public utility, and to authorize condemnation of lands to insure development of waterpower.

To overcome these fundamental difficulties, the Republican majority proposes to authorize the Water Storage Commission created by the 1915 Legislature to formulate and develop a State hydroelectric policy, to enter into the necessary negotiations with the Federal Government and Canada and to report to the Legislature its recommendations, together with the detailed plans and specifications and an estimate of the cost of the development.

Legislation to be proposed will include an amendment to the Constitution declaring power a public utility and providing that private lands may be taken for the development of power in boundary waters and also permitting the use of the forest preserves to the extent of 3 per cent. of the lands dedicated to the preserve under the Bird amendment.

William P. Capes, Secretary of the New York State Mayors' Conference, speaking for the conference, said tonight that the Republican program was a "worse attempt at conciliation than the 3 Per Cent. Beer bill." He declined to amplify his statement.

EUROPEANS NEED CLOTHES.

WASHINGTON, March 24. — Lack of clothing in the liberated countries of Central Europe is regarded by Herbert Hoover, European Relief Commissioner, as fully as serious as the shortage of food. In a cablegram today urging the American people to contribute liberally to the collection of clothing being made this week by the American Red Cross, Mr. Hoover said that in some of the war-devastated countries a considerable number of the population were unable to leave their homes because of insufficient clothing, while new-born babies in Serbia were wrapped in paper because cloth was not available.

"Illness, sickness, and death," said Mr. Hoover in his cablegram, "are directly attributable to a condition which is unimaginable to any one who has not seen it. The hospitals are without bandages and the patients are often dressed in rags. In Serbia, new-born babies are wrapped in paper for want of the necessary clothing. Men, women, and children insufficiently clothed and barefooted in the coldest weather are a common sight in Rumania.

"I cannot urge the American people too strongly to give from their plenty for the relief of suffering and privation in the liberated territories undergone by people who, for the most part, were allies with us in a great cause, and who have suffered from their devotion to that cause far more than the American people."

SUGGESTS BATTERY TUNNEL

Staten Island Committee Offers Plan for Direct Route.

Members of the Staten Island Subway Committee have sent to the city officials copies of a plan for extending the city's rapid transit system to Richmond County by means of a tunnel between the Battery and the island rather than across the Narrows from Brooklyn. The suggested route from the Battery provides for a five-section subway from the west side of Manhattan near its southern extremity to Ellis Island, thence to Robbins Reef, under the Kill van Kull to St. George and Tompkinsville, and then by surface line to Tottenville.

Another plan suggested by the committee calls for a tunnel under the North River from Manhattan to a point near Communipaw, thence by elevated along the New Jersey shore to Constable Hook, a tunnel under the Kill van Kull, and tracks running from it to Richmond Terrace, Stuyvesant Place, Tompkinsville, and Tottenville.

The committee says that the adoption of either one of these proposed routes would serve to keep the population of the city from drifting to places outside of its boundaries.

OPPOSE COURT SALARY RISE

Lawyers' Association Criticises Attitude of Municipal Justices.

In announcing yesterday that the Municipal Court Committee of the New York County Lawyers' Association had disapproved the bill increasing the salaries of Municipal Court Justices from $8,000 to $10,000, Isadore Montefiore Levy, Chairman of the committee, makes this expression as to the trend of the times:

"This is not the time to raise salaries of public officials earning $8,000 a year. It is wholesome that their scale of living be in harmony with the general community so that they can sympathetically and understandingly realize the problems that confront the great mass of the people. The day of the plutocrat is gone."

Mr. Levy pointed out that while it was true that the cost of living had gone up, on the other hand judges should not be attracted to office by monetary considerations. "Then again," Mr. Levy's report continued, "the committee regretfully states that the Judges have failed to reorganize the work of the courts and the assignment of Judges therein so that the work could be better and more efficaciously distributed. They might give first thought to this problem, and thus obtain greater results at the same money cost."

MANY CLAMOR FOR WORK.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, March 24.—More than 1,000 unemployed men, many of them former soldiers and sailors, stormed the Chicago City Hall today demanding work. The doors of the Departments of Public Works, Water Pipe Extension, and Streets were besieged by the men, many of whom were negroes who had seen service in the trenches.

A majority of them said that they were married and that their families were suffering. Food and clothing, they said, were needed, but they refused to accept charity.

Deputy Commissioner of Public Works William Burkhardt took personal charge of hiring as many of the men as possible, preference being given to former soldiers and sailors. Three hundred and ten were hired by Mr. Burkhardt before the City Hall closed for the day.

The Detriot Cadillac Motor Car Realty Company purchased yesterday the six-story terra cotta garage and service station of the Hudson Motor Car Company at 245, 247 and 249 West Sixty-seventh Street, running through the block to 248 and 250 West Sixty-eighth Street.

In part payment the buyers gave the Hudson Company the two-story department store building, occupying a plot 100 by 100 on the southeast corner of Sixty-second Street and Amsterdam Avenue. About $525,000 was involved in the transaction, which was negotiated by Cross & Brown. About two weeks ago the big service station of the Willys-Overland Company at 521 to 531 West Fifty-seventh Street, running through the block to 518 to 528 West Fifty-eighth Street, valued at about $1,000,000, was purchased by Jeremiah F. The property of M. Groh's Sons at 238 to 250 West Twenty-eighth Street and 251 West Twenty-seventh Street has been purchased by the International Fur Exchange of St. Louis, controlled by Funsten Brothers.

Confirmation of the transaction by George Delacy and E. Brighton Wilson, receivers, was given by the court yesterday, which approved an order permitting the transfer of title in the property to the above corporation for a sum of $440,000, subject to a mortgage for $120,000. The purchase was made for all cash, and the said mortgage is to be paid off immediately, leaving the property free of indebtedness.

Prior to the financial difficulties, M. Groh's Sons, former brewers, purchased the three tenements at 245 to 249 West Twenty-seventh Street, intending to enlarge the storage plant, owing to the increased demand for the storage of furs developing through the concentration of manufacturing furriers in this vicinity.

This property J. George Flammer, President of M. Groh's Sons, has agreed to transfer for the amount paid by the Grohs, $72,000. In addition, the adjoining properties, 237 to 243 West Twenty-seventh Street, are under contract of sale to the Grohs for $86,000. Under the order of sale, signed by Judge Knox in the Federal District Court, the Fur Exchange has the privilege of buying the latter properties at that price.

TWO INDICTMENTS STILL FACE O'LEARY

EXPECTED TO ASK FOR BAIL

Irish Editor Issues Statement Saying Jury's Action Is Vindication of His Americanism.

The expected application for bail for Jeremiah A. O'Leary, former editor of Bull, who was acquitted of four of five counts Sunday on an indictment which charged that he had entered into a conspiracy to obstruct the operation of the draft law, was not made yesterday. O'Leary is still awaiting trial on two other indictments, both of them involving much more serious charges than were those on which he has just been tried. One of these indictments charges conspiracy to commit treason and the other conspiracy to commit espionage in time of war. It is considered doubtful if either of the offenses alleged in the untried indictments are bailable.

That O'Leary will make an effort to get bail is considered certain. He appeared on the point of applying for it in person Sunday afternoon, when Judge Hand, before whom he was tried, informed him that at that time the only thing the Court was concerned with was the verdict of the jury. The application will probably be made by Colonel Thomas B. Felder and Arthur O'Leary, the leading counsel for the prisoner.

There is no foundation for the report which was current yesterday that the Government might quash the conspiracy to commit treason and the conspiracy to commit espionage in time of war indictments. O'Leary's co-defendants in the untried indictments are John T. Ryan, the fugitive Buffalo lawyer; J. Willard Robinson, Commander Karl Roediger, an alleged German spy; Mme. Victorica, also an alleged German agent; Albert Paul Fricke of Mount Vernon, and Emil Kipper.

"I consider the outcome of my trial a victory of truth over falsehood, a complete vindication of my Americanism. The American of Irish blood loves America too much to hurt her by word or deed. No American jury can ever be convinced, no matter how anxious prosecution may be to secure a conviction, that an Irish-American could be unfaithful to the United States. The verdict settles the question that criticism of Britain is not disloyal to the United States. It also establishes that free press and free speech are still inviolable.

"The jury was a representative body economically and racially. It was the Government's own panel. It debated long and earnestly and acquitted on all counts save one, and in that one two-thirds of the jury decided I was not guilty. The indictment originally covered eight separate offenses. The vote on all eight counts was 92 to 4, or on the five counts actually submitted, 56 to 4. Had it not been for one man I would have been unanimously acquitted.

"Although the Government really tried all its indictments in one I am still in jail. I have been held without bail for nine months, but was tried on a bailable offense, an unprecedented procedure.

"My faith in American justice, always strong, has now been fortified by my vindication. The Socialists and Bolshevists were hoping and praying for my conviction, and the prosecution unconsciously was helping their cause in prosecuting me. I am no Socialist. I am no Bolshevist, and my faith in American institutions and the faith of many others of my race would have been severely shaken had that jury unjustly said 'Guilty.' I therefore emerge from my experiences loving my country more than ever, and I earnestly hope that those who have been losing faith because men have been persecuted for having opinions may accept my vindication as an indication that American constitutional Government is the best government, and that American juries, where issues are properly presented, can be depended upon to do justice."

ARMY CAPTAIN A SUICIDE.

CHICAGO, March 24.—Captain William Murray, formerly in charge of the reserve officers' training camps at the University of Pennsylvania and at Notre Dame University, South Bend, Ind., committed suicide by shooting himself at a hotel here today. He was 29 years of age and was recently assigned to Camp Grant for duty.

He left a note leaving his possessions to his mother, of 435½ Classon Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y. There was also a sealed envelope said to contain a note received by Murray from a young woman of South Bend.

Military intelligence officers who took charge of the body said that there was nothing to show that the suicide was due to anything in his military life.

Captain Murray lived at 435½ Classon Avenue, Brooklyn, with his mother, a brother, and several younger sisters. The family had been advised by telegraph of Captain Murray's death last night, but in the absence of details, refused to discuss the matter.

NO ANNULMENT FOR HART.

Justice Russell Benedict, in the Supreme Court, in Brooklyn, yesterday, dismissed the application of James Hervey Hart, the 87 year old bridegroom, for an annulment of his marriage to his nineteen year old bride, Mrs. Katie Wolf Hart.

After disposing of the action for annulment, Justice Benedict announced that he was ready to proceed with the suit for separation brought by Mrs. Hart. He stated that if counsel for Mr. Hart conceded that their client had abandoned his youthful wife, the trial would be a mere formality. Counsel for Mr. Hart asked for delay in this proceeding and it was set for next Monday.

WANTS MASCULINE CHURCH.

Editor Tells Women's Club That Virile Workers Are Needed.

At the annual service of the Churchwomen's Club of New York, of which Mrs. Richard Aldrich is President, held in the Chapel of St. Martin of Tours at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine yesterday afternoon, the Rev. William Austin Smith, editor of the Churchman, made a strong appeal for a virile church and ministry and the women's aid to bring it about. His subject was, "How Can the Women Make the Church More Masculine?" He expressed the wish for more forceful women to work in the church and to get away from the "mellow afternoon tea atmosphere" between the women and their relations to the church and the clergy.

"You ask with concern about the health of your clergyman. Why not ask about the health of your ashman? Don't look so much for attractiveness and magnetism in your clergyman as that he does his work in a manly way. Check up on your priests and your bishops; they will like it after a time.

"We have in this country women of great strength and ability, but the church has been under the influence of the more sentimental women. We are going to do something with this church of ours and we want real women to go over the top with the men. Good preaching has become almost extinct in the Episcopal Church. We have men of marvelous administrative ability but not preachers. The trouble is that we have no specialists. We have poor preachers not because we have not geniuses, but because the clergy have so much of the other kind of work to do. They have more questions of administrative affairs and detail than some of our great captains of industry. You cannot be a great preacher and a great administrator, too. Two-thirds of the work done by the rector and curate could be done by the women."

He closed by asking for less sentimentality in the women's relation to the church and more a sense of craftsmanship.

The Vice Presidents of the Club are Mrs. Vladimir G. Simkhovitch, Mrs. James G. Croswell, Mrs. Howard C. Robbins, and Miss Edith Hadley. Miss Margaret Jeffreys Hobart is the Secretary.

ROOSEVELT ADVISES SCOUTS

National Council Urged to Get Experienced Soldiers.

Lieutenant Col. Theodore Roosevelt, who was one of the speakers at a luncheon held yesterday at the Commodore in connection with the convention of the National Council of the Boy Scouts of America, pledged his support to the scout movement and declared it was a great factor in the country.

He urged the organization to obtain as scoutmasters the returning soldiers because of the great experience they had had. "There is another advantage in having them," he said. "They have done something for the United States. Until a man has done something for this country he has never really got the feeling of ownership in his land that he should have."

Colonel Roosevelt related incidents which he observed while on the other side and spoke of the democratizing influence of the army. The speaker was given a rising vote of thanks by the delegates who come from all parts of the United States.

HIGH BRITISH HONOR TO MAJOR GEN. READ

CONFERRED BY KING GEORGE

Field Marshal Haig, in Letter, Tells Deeds of the 27th and 30th Divisions.

Major Gen. George W. Read, who commanded the 2d Army Corps, which included the 27th and 30th Divisions, has been made a Knight of the Order of the Bath by King George, according to advices received here yesterday. The ceremony of investiture took place in the British Embassy, Paris, on Jan. 15, Lord Derby, the British Ambassador, officiating.

The notification of the award received by General Read was as follows:

British Embassy, Paris,
Dec. 20, 1918.

Major Gen. Read, Commanding 2d Corps, General Headquarters, 2d Corps, American Expeditionary Force, Le Mans, Sarthe.

Sir: As you have no doubt been officially informed, his Majesty King George V. has been pleased to confer upon you the distinction of Knight of the Order of the Bath.

His Excellency the British Ambassador desires to invest you with the insignia of this order, and I am directed by him to ask if you will be good enough to inform me at two or three days' notice of your next visit to Paris, in order that the necessary arrangements for this ceremony may be made.

I have the honor to be, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
DAVIS HENDERSON,
Lieutenant General,
Military Counselor.

Some of the feats of Major Gen. Read's leadership which the British Government recognized are referred to in Field Marshal Haig's letter, as follows:

GENERAL HEADQUARTERS,
BRITISH ARMIES IN THE FIELD,
Nov. 16, 1918.

General Read, 2d American Corps:

Now that the American 2d Corps is leaving the British zone, I wish once more to thank you and all officers, noncommissioned officers, and men under your command, on behalf both of myself and all ranks of the British armies in France and Flanders, for the very gallant and efficient service you have rendered during the period of your operations with the Fourth British Army.

On Sept. 29 you took part with distinction in the great and critical attack which shattered the enemy's resistance in the Hindenburg Line and opened the road to final victory. The deeds of the 27th and 30th American Divisions, who on that day took Bellicourt and Nauroy and so gallantly sustained the desperate struggle for Bony, will rank with the highest achievements of this war. They will always be remembered by the British regiments that fought beside you.

Since that date, through three weeks of almost continuous fighting, you advanced from one success to another, overcoming all resistance, beating off numerous counterattacks, and capturing several thousand prisoners and many guns. The names of Brancourt, Premont, Busigny, Vaux Andigny, St. Souplet, and Mazinghein testify to the dash and energy of your attacks.

I rejoice at the success which has attended your efforts and I am proud to have had you under my command.

D. HAIG, Field Marshal.

In addition to the British decoration, General Read also holds the Distinguished Service Medal, awarded by the President on Jan. 8, for "exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services." General Read came out of West Point in the Class of 1883, and served first with the 16th Infantry. When war came he was serving on the General Staff with the rank of Colonel.

Twenty-Seventh!

We wish there were some medium less commercial than an advertisement to tell you what it means to us to have you marching again up Fifth Avenue—your last trench—a trench walled by the millions who love you.

A year ago you disappeared into that hell hole in Northern France. Followed many months of doubt and dread when no word came.

Then you broke the Hindenburg Line. You were cut to pieces but you went through.

You were the tempered edge of the great wedge of Democracy, rending and crushing, shattering and destroying forever that thousand mile chain of steel that was forged to enslave mankind.

We can only cheer you today, but those cheers will mean that we shall never forget you.

History, as you have made it, never dies. Hundreds of years from now, New Yorkers will tell with pride of the Twenty-Seventh in France.
